

NOTE BOOK # 30A

GEORGE O. ABBOTT.

Was Well Known and Successful Merchant, formerly Proprietor of Richardson Meat Market. June 7 1916

George Oscar Abbott, 65, for the last 14 years—a well-known merchant of Brattleboro, died at 1 o'clock Monday morning in his home, 85 Green street, of a complication of afflictions. Mr. Abbott had been in failing health several years, but had been confined to his bed only four days. He was up a short time Friday and again Sunday about the house.

Mr. Abbott was born in Strafford (Vt.) March 25, 1851, a son of Monroe and Lavinia (Cross) Abbott. He spent his boyhood in his native place and at the age of 18 went to Sutton, where he was employed at his trade as a brick mason. He married there, March 8, 1873, Miss Viola Campbell and continued to live there seven years after his marriage. Two years were spent in Bethel, Me., where he conducted a farm and worked at his trade.

Moving to Lebanon, N. H., he conducted a provision business 20 years, until he moved to Brattleboro and bought the W. F. Richardson market on Elliot street. Later he was in other locations, and the firm name is now G. O. Abbott & Son. He was a successful business man and after the Grange building fire he bought that property and rebuilt the building in which his business was located.

Mr. Abbott was a member of the Centre Congregational church, of Protective Grange and the Vermont Wheel club.

He leaves, besides his wife, one daughter, Ethel L., wife of W. J. Ackerman of Springfield (Vt.), and one son, Sherman F. Abbott, who was associated with his father; one brother, F. M. Abbott of St. Johnsbury, and one sister, Mrs. D. A. McCaskill of Montreal, P. Q.

A prayer service was held at the house at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning by Rev. Richard Clapp, pastor of the Centre Congregational church, and Rev. Roy M. Houghton of New Haven, Conn., a former pastor. There were many floral remembrances. The body was taken that afternoon to Springfield (Vt.) for funeral services in the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. J. Ackerman, Rev. Warren L. Noyes of Nashua, N. H., officiating. The burial took place in Springfield. The bearers here were Oscar F. Benson, George E. Foster, John M. Dugan and John R. Manley of the Vermont Wheel club and S. W. Edwards and S. W. SHERMAN ABBOTT DIES BESIDE CAR

Victim of Heart Attack Brought on by Pushing Auto

IN GROCERY TRADE HERE THIRTY YEARS Dec 29 1939

Sherman F. Abbott, 56, formerly a well-known grocery store proprietor here for many years, died suddenly Wednesday morning about 9.30 beside his automobile a short distance from his Abbott road home.

Mr. Abbott is believed to have died instantly of a heart attack brought on by the exertion of pushing his car. He had suffered from heart trouble but had been feeling unusually well recently.

He was found by a neighbor, Mrs. Frank W. Richardson, and was lying in a ditch beside the road. The door on the driver's side of the car, which had slid to the left of the road, was open as if Mr. Abbott had planned to jump into the car when the motor started. Mr. Abbott had left his home, a few rods away, to drive down town.

He was born in Bethel, Me., on Dec. 10, 1883, a son of George O. and Viola (Campbell) Abbott. He graduated from high school in Worcester, Mass., and attended Kimball Union academy, Meriden, N. H. Coming to Brattleboro in 1902 he entered the grocery business with his father, the firm being known as G. O. Abbott & Son. In 1917, after his father's death, Sherman Abbott bought the entire business and continued to operate the store in the Hildreth building on Elliot street until April, 1931, when he sold it to Fred F. Fisher.

Mr. Abbott bought as a home the so-called Sylvester farm in West Brattleboro in 1921 and after his retirement 10 years later established a poultry raising business at the farm. Mr. Abbott made his only bid for public office in March, 1936, when he was defeated by 14 votes for the office of selectman by the incumbent, Henry E. Whitney.

Mr. Abbott married on April 25, 1906, Miss Elizabeth Tutbill of this town, who survives. He also leaves one sister, Mrs. W. J. Ackerman, of Springfield, Vt.

Funeral services will be held at Arthur L. Rohde's funeral home this (Friday) afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. D. B. F. Hoyt, pastor of All Souls church, will officiate. Burial will take place in Morningside cemetery.

GRACE B. ADAM

1991 - 2016

Brattleboro - Grace Beverly Adam of Brattleboro, died on November 24, 2016.

She was born at Brattleboro Memorial Hospital on January 16, 1991, and was a lifelong resident here. She was educated at Green St. School, BAMS and BUHS, and attended college classes at the University of Maine and Greenfield Community College.

Grace had a love of the outdoors which began early, in her enjoyment of the Whetstone Brook that flows by the house she grew up in. She was an avid snowboarder, hiker, and rock climber. Her real passion was for travel; she journeyed to China on a high school trip, and visited Japan in 2009 as a Freeman scholar with the Experiment in International Living. With her generous smile, upbeat energy, and unforgettable sense of humor, she made friends easily on these travels—both among her group members and especially with the people she met in these countries.

After high school Grace travelled in Europe with close friends from Brooklyn, NY. Grace was also a WOOF'er: with WorldWide Opportunities on Organic Farms, she went twice on her own to Hawaii to learn about landscape and culture and indigenous health practices. With her parents, Grace traveled from the desert in California to the Old City in Cartagena, Columbia. Her love of travel and of meeting new people was a hallmark of Grace's personality. She will be remembered by these people, and by all those who loved her, for the way she could put anyone at ease with her smile, and then move things along with her contagious sense of wonder and enthusiasm for life.

Grace is survived by her parents, Marcia Olander and Drew Adam, her brother Max Adam and wife Hannah Richards of Greenfield, Massachusetts, and their children Sina and Julian. She will be missed by her sister and soulmate Ida Adam, also of Brattleboro, and Ida's partner Misha Moss of Spofford, New Hampshire.

Mrs. Augusta Adams, wife of Clark L. Adams, died last Saturday morning at the age of 67. The funeral, at which Rev. Lewis Groat officiated, was attended by a large circle of relatives and by a large portion of the townspeople, by all of whom she was deservedly held in high esteem. Mrs. Adams had a well known and worthy parentage, being the daughter of David and Olive Mather. By her prayers, her counsel, her cheer, her service of song, a diligent Sunday school and mission work, and by generous, substantial aid of various kinds, she did much for the church in Marlboro, of which she became a member in early life. C. F. ADAMS DIES; CHAIN STORE HEAD

First National Founder,
Born in Vt., Married
Local Woman

ACTIVE IN HOCKEY,
BASEBALL, RACING

BOSTON — Charles F. Adams, 70, a country boy who founded the largest New England-owned grocery chain and became the region's best known sports promoter at the same time, died yesterday.

His versatility as a financier led him to organize the First National Stores and to set up two of Boston's biggest sports ventures—the Bruins hockey club and Suffolk Downs race track. For a short time too he held controlling interest in the Boston Braves baseball club.

In Nominal Retirement.

Adams has been in nominal retirement since suffering a stroke that partially paralyzed him 10 years ago, but he kept his office in downtown Boston.

He died shortly after midnight at the Phillips House of Massachusetts General Hospital, which he entered a week ago.

Adams—known as "CF" among his associates and in the business world—often was confused with Charles Francis Adams, the former secretary of the Navy, of the old Boston Adams family. They were not related.

Born in Newport, Vt., Adams was the son of a lumberman. He had a natural flair for business, however, and left his home town at the age of 18 to work as a $2-a-week clerk in his uncle's grocery store in Springfield, Mass.

When this business failed, he went on the road as a salesman—first selling tobacco and pickles and later bonds. It was while in the investment business that Adams met John T. O'Connor, operator of one of New England's three leading grocery chains.

Took It Over in 1915.

When Connor retired in 1915, Adams organized a financial group to take over the firm, which then had 110 stores. Known as "Brookside" stores, the number grew to 500 and later merged with the two other chains to become the First National with Adams as treasurer.

During this time, Adams served as a director of the Boston Arena, which was the center of sports activity. In 1924, he formed the Boston Professional Hockey Association and obtained a national hockey league franchise.

He had trouble getting players until he signed Art Ross to a $5,000 contract as manager—a price high for the league at that time. When some one commented on this, Adams retorted "I like high priced men."

Ross brought the Boston club—known as the Bruins—from the cellar to repeated championships and is still with the club as vice-president and general manager.

Adams served as director of racing at Suffolk Downs until it was sold two years ago for about $4,000,000. He sold the controlling interest in the Bruins to his only child, Weston, who is still operating the club.

Besides his widow, the former Mae Woolard of Brattleboro, Vt., Adams leaves four grandchildren.

Mr. Adams was born in Marlboro Aug. 11, 1861, the second of three children of Henry and Ann (Winchester) Adams. In early life he came to Brattleboro to attend school and worked in Scott & Jones's grocery store, which was then where the Bay State store now is. Later he worked in the Scott & Jones store which is now the Miles grocery store. Meanwhile he spent three years in the West. Eight years ago he went to Springfield, Mass., and conducted a rooming house, but for the past two years he had been employed by the Fisk Rubber Co., giving up work two weeks ago on account of illness.

which have made him the active, useful and onward-looking citizen which the Brattleboro community have known so well. His native impulses no less than his fixed principles of life made him stand always for those things which make for good morals, for religion, for clean social conditions, clean politics, and progressive community life, and he not only believed in these things, but his large business interests and personal affairs did not keep him from giving freely of his time and energy and enthusiasm for their promotion. Still more than this, in every time of community need his own energy and enthusiasm became contagious and he imparted courage and confidence and determination to those about him. He was a man of positive convictions and positive speech, but in his relations with his fellow townsmen he knew nothing of party, or sect, or creed, or class distinctions. He was a son of the New England soil, and so far as the community life was concerned every man was his neighbor and fellow worker.

In his relations of personal friendship he filled a place peculiarly his own. He was a delightful and inspiring companion. He met his friends heart to heart. His cordiality, his sincerity, his quick intuitions, his ready wit and ready sympathy called forth an answering sentiment of warm affection which will always remain a cherished heritage in the hearts of those who knew him best. To these friends the world is narrower because he has gone from it, and there is a deep consciousness that his hearty good fellowship and cheerful optimism must always be sorely missed.

The Funeral Services.

Funeral services for the Springfield friends were held at the home at 36 Spruceland avenue Sunday at 3.30 o'clock, Rev. Frank W. Merrick, Ph. D., pastor of Faith church, officiating and Rev. Dr. George E. Martin of Springfield, Mr. Adams's former pastor in Brattleboro, offering prayer and reading the scriptures. Rev. Mr. Merrick spoke from the text, "Men who have been a comfort to me," and his remarks were of a very appreciative character. Three selections were sung by Miss Esther Dale of Springfield, formerly of Townshend. They were "Abide with me," "The Lord is my Shepherd" and the old hymn, "O love that will not let me go," sung to the tune of "St. Margaret." The last selection was a favorite hymn of Mr. Adams. There was a large attendance of people of the church and the residents of that locality, who manifested a deep sense of the loss which the church and community had sustained in the death of Mr. Adams.

The body was brought to Brattleboro at 11 o'clock Monday and was taken to the Congregational church, where it lay in state from 12.30 to 2 o'clock. As the people gathered for the funeral service Miss Izetta Stewart rendered on the organ a number of familiar selections from the church hymnal, and at 3 o'clock the church was filled with friends and business associates of Mr. Adams. The business places and the schools in the incorporated district were closed as a mark of respect, and the flags on the school grounds were placed at half-mast. The Schubert male quartet of Boston sang with beautiful effect four selections, "Lead, Kindly Light," Whittier's "Eternal Goodness" adapted to a chant, "The Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" and "Nearer, my God, to Thee." Mr. Adams's special fondness for music by male voices made the quartet's participation in the service peculiarly fitting.

Rev. Roy M. Houghton, pastor, offered prayer and read scripture selections, and Rev. Dr. Martin spoke of Mr. Adams's life with reference to the four relations into which every man's life must fall—in business, to the church, in the home and with himself. He did not attempt a eulogy, but spoke as a personal friend, recalling especially the source of strength and helpfulness which he had found in Mr. Adams in the early days of his ministry in Brattleboro. Rev. Dr. Martin offered the closing prayer and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Houghton. The committal service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Martin at the mausoleum in Morningside cemetery. The bearers were George L. Dunham, Dennison Cowles, Harry L. Emerson and Frank L. Hunt, and the honorary bearers were Rev. E. Q. S. Osgood and Judge J. L. Martin. Mr. Adams's associates on the school board, A. B. Clapp, H. P. Wellman, O. L. French and Charles A. Harris. A large number of members of the Masonic fraternity of Brattleboro attended the funeral in a body, also members of the Brattleboro board of trade and the Vermont Wheel club. Among those from away were Fred C. Stedman, Edward H. Norton and Henry S. Waldron, representing Faith church of Springfield, Kenneth B. Emerson of Brooklyn, Charles S. Emerson of Milford, N. H., Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Turner of Watertown, Mass., Miss Grace M. Emerson of Albany, N. Y., and Robert W. Mitchell of Springfield. There were very many beautiful floral remembrances from individuals and from the various organizations with which Mr. Adams was affiliated.

Few similar events in this community have caused so universal a feeling of sadness and of quick and sincere sympathy as has the death of Mrs. L. F. Adams, which took place on Monday morning, leaving five little children motherless, the youngest born after her seizure with the fatal attack of pneumonia. The loss to the stricken husband is irreparable, and to her father and mother, now well advanced in years, it is scarcely less so. Mrs. Adams was the youngest surviving daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Crosby. Her marriage to Mr. Adams took place 18 years ago, and seven children have been born to them.
She was a devoted mother, an earnest,

LEROY F. ADAMS

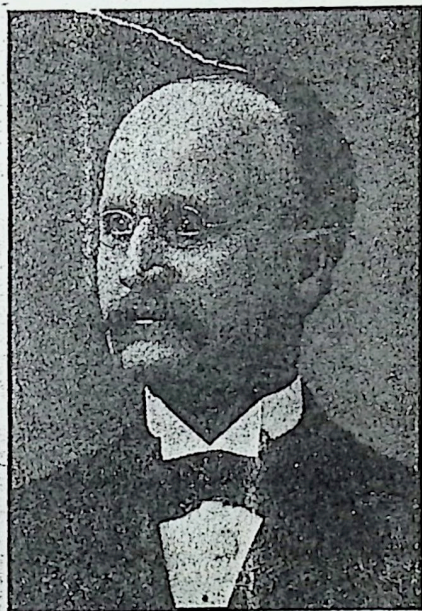

Senior Member of Firm of E. Crosby & Co. Died Friday Night

Feb 4 — 1910

Had Been Ill Ten Days in Springfield,
Mass.—Funeral Held in Brattleboro
Monday Afternoon.

Leroy F. Adams, 63, senior member of the firm of E. Crosby & Co. of Brattleboro, and for many years a prominent and influential man in all business and community affairs in this town, whose critical illness was mentioned in these columns last week, died Friday night at 7.45 at 36 Spruceland avenue, Springfield, Mass., where he and his family had been living in a house which they rented furnished for the season.

Mr. Adams contracted a cold when he came with the other members of the Springfield, Mass., board of trade on their trip to Brattleboro, which included a sleighride in the snow storm, four weeks ago today. He was greatly interested in the plan to have the Springfield men see Brattleboro, and took an active part in arranging for the trip. He was in Brattleboro again the following Thursday (Jan. 21) to attend the annual meeting of the Brattleboro Savings bank, of which he was vice president, and was present at the dinner at the Brooks House in the afternoon. Although feeling somewhat indisposed he attended to his regular work until Tuesday, February 1, when he remained at home for the first time. He then seemed to be on the verge of a nervous collapse. He continued to grow rapidly worse and on Feb. 4 his condition became alarming. Pneumonia, affecting one lung, and an acute kidney trouble developed. Nearly all of the time after Feb. 5 he had lain in a comatose state, and throughout the week the doctors and nurses, who were with him constantly, had resorted to the use of oxygen and heart stimulants to keep him alive. His eldest son, Frederic, went to Springfield Feb. 4 as soon as the critical nature of his father's illness became known and remained there until the end. Mr. Adams's wife and his other children were also with him. Dr. Miller, his family physician in Brattleboro, who was in Springfield in daily consultation with the physicians there in the last week of Mr. Adams's illness, was also present when the end came.

Leroy Franklin Adams was born in Marlboro April 23, 1846, the eldest of the four children of Lucius F. and Clorinda (Winchester) Adams. His father was a successful farmer and highly respected citizen of Marlboro, who died in Brattleboro in 1881 at the age of 65. His mother, who was the daughter of Carley P. Winchester, died Aug. 19, 1890, at the age of 65.

Mr. Adams attended the district schools of Marlboro and the select schools of that town and Wilmington, receiving a better training than usually fell to the lot of a boy in a rural community in those days. He remained at home until he attained his majority, when he entered the employ of C. H. Smith in Northampton, Mass., with whom he remained three years.

In 1870 he came to Brattleboro to work for the late Edward Crosby, whose flour and grain commission business was then beginning to assume large proportions. He at first performed manual labor, but his intelligence and willingness to work won the approval of his employer and he was given the position of bookkeeper in the office. He acquired an intimate knowledge of the methods used by the firm, showed particular aptitude for the selling end of the business, and was therefore made the firm's traveling representative, a position which he filled with signal success a number of years. In 1876 he was admitted to membership in the firm of E. Crosby & Co., which included at that time the late Edward Crosby, founder of the business, the latter's eldest son, Edward C. Crosby, and Charles B. Rice. In 1880 Mr. Rice, owing to impaired health, withdrew from the firm. The death of Edward Crosby, the founder, occurred April 2, 1890. Edward Crosby's youngest son, Charles R. Crosby, was admitted to the firm in 1888, shortly after attaining his majority. On the death of Edward Crosby in 1890 the membership of the firm included E. C. Crosby, L. F. Adams and Charles R. Crosby until 1896, when E. C. Crosby withdrew to devote his entire attention to street railroad and contracting enterprises. On E. C. Crosby's retirement L. F. Adams and C. R. Crosby became sole owners of the business which has been conducted under their management up to the present time.

In 1884 business men of Brattleboro formed the Vermont Live Stock company, of which Edward Crosby was president, for the purpose of carrying on a cattle raising business in South Dakota, where an extensive ranch was bought. Mr. Adams acted as general manager of this company three years, having headquarters in Sturgis, South Dakota. In 1887 Mr. Adams resigned his position with the live stock company and returned to Brattleboro to resume his active connection with the firm of E. Crosby & Co.

In 1889 E. C. Crosby and L. F. Adams bought the Brooks House property from the executors of the George J. Brooks estate, and the hotel was conducted a number of years under the firm name of Crosby & Adams. The firm remodelled the hotel and made many improvements in it. During his partner's absence from Brattleboro in connection with his street railroad interests Mr. Adams was the directing head of the Brooks House, giving to it a large amount of personal attention even when a general manager of the hotel was employed. In 1906 Mr. Adams sold his interest in the Brooks House to his partner and since then E. C. Crosby has been sole owner of that property.

In 1904 L. F. Adams and Charles R. Crosby bought the American House, which had been a landmark on Main street for a century. They tore down the old hotel in 1906 and erected on its site what is known as the American building, one of the finest structures for business purposes in New England.

In 1906 Mr. Adams was instrumental in forming the Springfield Flour & Grain company in Springfield, Mass., a stock concern with a capital of $50,000, which has since been increased to $100,000. Mr. Adams had devoted almost his entire time to this business in the past three years. He was president of the company, David Stott of Detroit is vice president and George E. Adams is secretary and treasurer, these three being the main owners of the concern. The company has warehouses on Liberty street in Springfield and does a general wholesale business in flour, grain and other food products.

In October, 1872, Mr. Adams married Ella H. Crosby, daughter of his employer, Edward Crosby. Mrs. Adams died Jan. 27, 1890, leaving five children—Frederic C. Adams, teller of the Peoples National bank of Brattleboro; George E. Adams, associated with his father in business in Springfield; Ruth L. Crosby, and Ella C. Adams, all of Springfield. In 1899 Mr. Adams married Helen M. Emerson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Emerson of Brattleboro, who survives, and of this union there is one daughter, Edith. Mr. Adams also leaves a sister, Helen, wife of Charles H. Smith of Minneapolis, Minn., and a brother, Lucius W. Adams of Brattleboro.

Mr. Adams had given the school board of district No. 2, Brattleboro, efficient services as a member of the prudential committee, serving on the board at two different periods and at one time acting as its chairman. He was first elected in 1895, when Dr. Henry D. Holton declined reelection after being at the head of the board many years. Mr. Adams declined reelection in 1898, but in 1904 he was elected to succeed Charles H. Thompson, resigned. His service has been continuous since that time, as he was reelected in 1906 and again in 1909.

Mr. Adams was a member of Brattleboro lodge, No. 102, F. & A. M., of Fort Dummer chapter, No. 12, R. A. M.; of Beauseant commandery, No. 7, K. T.; and of Mt. Sinai temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Montpelier. He was a member of the boards of trade in both Brattleboro and Springfield, of the Vermont Wheel club, and of The Exchange. He was vice president and a member of the board of investment of the Brattleboro Savings bank.

He had been a member of the Centre Congregational church many years and had been president of the board of trustees of the church society. He was a lover of music and had always taken a deep interest in the musical portion of the church services. He had expended a large amount of time and money in preparing the text and illustrations for a history of his native town of Marlboro. This matter is arranged in convenient form, but it never has been published. In every office or position which he held of a public or semi-public nature he made himself felt as an active and directing force.

During his residence of three years in Springfield Mr. Adams had taken a strong hold on the people of that city with whom he was brought in contact in a business and social way. There, as here, he impressed himself as a man of marked activity, of earnestness, of broad views and of substantial worth. He was a member of the Nayasset and Winthrop clubs. The Springfield Republican recalls the fact that when he first went to Springfield and lived at Cooley's hotel he was usually the centre of a group of friends who gathered about him there. After his family moved to Springfield Mr. Adams associated himself with Faith Congregational church at the corner of Fort Pleasant and Sumner avenues and at once made himself felt as a strong and enthusiastic worker in all its activities. He was made president of the men's club of the church and was much interested in plans for a proposed new church building.

In his personal character Mr. Adams represented the best type of our native New England manhood. Born and raised in the rugged environment of the life of the hill farms 60 years ago, from this source he inherited and developed those qualities of independence, energy and persistence which marked his mature life. As he grew to manhood and entered on a business career he showed a grasp of affairs, an executive ability, a breadth of view and an enthusiastic public spirit

FALLS TO DEATH IN HIS AIRPLANE

Lieut. H. Verne Adams of Brattleboro Killed in Tennessee

Feb 22 — 1919

Plunged 200 Feet on Gusty Day While Instructing Cadet—Military Funeral Held Here Tuesday.

Lieut. Harold V. Adams of Brattleboro, commonly spoken of as Verne Adams, who has been in the aviation service the past year, was killed by falling in an airplane at the Park Field aviation camp at Millington, Tenn., about 2 p. m. Thursday, February 20. A telegram conveyed the news to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wales E. Adams of Putney road, next morning and mention of the fact was made in Associated Press dispatches.

Lieut. Adams was an instructor in the aviation camp, which is near Memphis, and it is probable that he was giving instruction at the time of the accident, as a cadet, M. A. Smith of Emporia, Pa., fell with him and was injured.

LIEUT. H. VERNE ADAMS.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams received a letter from Lieut. Adams Thursday telling of his work and saying he was well, and the message Friday came as a great shock.

Lieut. Adams was 23 years old. He was born in East Dover Dec. 21, 1895, a son of Wales E. and Belle (Hale) Adams. When he was two years old the family moved to Guilford, and they moved to West Brattleboro when he was six years old. For several years previous to last summer his father was manager of the F. Z. Dickinson farm. Lieut. Adams graduated from the high school here in 1914, in the general course, and throughout his course he was a brilliant student and companionable young man, much interested in athletics. He was a member of the First Baptist church.

Entering the University of Vermont at Burlington, he would have graduated in the class of 1918, but he left in his junior year to enter the aviation service.

In January, 1916, he was made assistant manager of the university football team and assistant manager of the 1918 Ariel, his class publication. He also became a member of the Press club.

In November, 1918, Lieut. Adams was elected president of the junior class and at about the same time was elected manager of the football team.

He was a thoroughly reliable, capable and energetic young man, who gave promise of marked success in life.

Besides his parents he leaves two brothers, Corporal Ray D. Adams of Company D, 110th United States infantry, in France, and Alton W. Adams, who is at home.

A letter from Corp. Ray Adams told of his leading a squad of men over the top in the St. Mihiel drive, the first purely American drive, of being wounded by a shell and being taken to a hospital. He was in the class with his brother, Lieut. Harold V. Adams, in the University of Vermont.

The body arrived here on the night train Sunday, which was late on account of the storm, and was taken to the home of his parents on Putney road. It was accompanied by Lieut. F. J. Foley of Palmer, Mass., fighting observer at the Park Field post, leaving Memphis Friday afternoon. Lieut. Foley and Lieut. Adams were members of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, the former in Worcester Institute of Technology and the latter in the University of Vermont.

Lieut. Foley stated to a member of The Phoenix staff Monday that there were no near witnesses to the accident as it happened half a mile north of the aviation field, less than 200 feet from the ground. Cadet M. A. Smith of Emporia, Pa., who was reported slightly injured, was injured severely and had not recovered sufficiently to tell of the accident when Lieut. Foley left. It is assumed that the cadet was driving the airplane, but there is no certainty as to that. The day was unfavorable for flying, so much so that the cadets were not permitted to make solo flights, the wind being gusty and changeable. This was the third bad accident at Park Field last week, the aviators in the two previous accidents being injured severely.

In the case of Lieut. Adams, who was strapped to the seat, as the nose of the machine struck the ground Lieut. Adams' head was thrown forward, striking the engine and fracturing his skull and jaw. One leg also was broken and internal injuries were inflicted.

In its report of the accident the Memphis Commercial Appeal said: "The accident occurred while the two young airmen were practicing making forced landings at a point about half a mile north of Park Field aviation camp. They had made a number of landings and risen again, but as the nose of the airplane was turned to the ground during their last fatal flight it fell suddenly and could not be straightened out for a safe landing. The accident was witnessed from the field and an ambulance hurried to the spot."

Military funeral services were held in the First Baptist church at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The pastor, Rev. Clark T. Brownell, was assisted by Rev. George E. Tomkinson of Philadelphia, a former pastor and personal friend of Lieut. Adams. The services were largely attended.

The ministers conducted a prayer service at the home of the young man's parents at 12 o'clock, noon, after which the body was taken to the church. The casket was covered with a United States flag and was surrounded by a wealth of beautiful flowers including an aviation design from Park field, Millington, Tenn., and pieces from the college fraternity of which Lieut. Adams was a member, and from other organizations and individuals. In the audience was a delegation from the class of 1914 in the Brattleboro high school, members of each of the present classes, a delegation from the Baraca class of the Baptist church and a good number of soldiers in uniform.

The ushers and bearers were all military men. The ushers were Corporal Clyde W. Horton of the University of Vermont, representing the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity; and Private C. Warner Hopkins. The bearers were Lieut. F. J. Foley of Palmer, Mass., who came here from Tennessee with the body and who is in the air service; Lieut. Stanley C. Fitts, air service; Lieut. Laurence G. Sherman, air service; Private Jacob P. Estey, chemical warfare service; Private Leslie W. Dines, infantry; and Private Raymond J. Harris, ordnance. All but Lieut. Foley are Brattleboro men.

The organist was Sergeant Earl E. Braman, who recently came from Camp Meade to be musical instructor in the schools, and three selections were sung by Private Ernest V. Barre, artillery, Abide With Me, Lead, Kindly Light, and The Homeland.

The burial took place in Locust Ridge cemetery on the Putney road.

A letter to Mr. and Mrs. Adams from Major J. W. Simons, jr., signal corps, commanding the air service school headquarters at Park Field, has just been received, in which Lieut. Adams is spoken of in high terms. The body of the letter follows:

"It is my painful duty to confirm the sad news conveyed to you by wire yesterday and to express my very sincere sympathy. Though Lieutenant Adams had been a member of this garrison for only a few months, he has won a host of friends who, with you, mourn his loss. He met death fearlessly, while in the performance of his duty, and a nobler end no man could hope for. He died for his country as really and as bravely as did the heroes of Argonne Forest or Chateau Thierry. You are to be congratulated on having such a son, the memory of whom shall always be a source of inspiration and comfort to you."

Fred Adams, 81, Killed in Mass. Crash

Sept 19, 1960
Long-Time Banker
In Doctor's Auto;
Latter Badly Hurt

Frederic Charles Adams, 81, of 10 Tyler Street, engaged in banking in Brattleboro for nearly 65 years, was killed in an automobile accident in Whately, Mass., yesterday afternoon while en route to his home here.

Mr. Adams, vice-chairman of the board of the Vermont National & Savings Bank and former treasurer of the Vermont Savings Bank for 38 years, was riding with Dr. J. Alexander Van Heuven, 62, of New Haven, Conn., critically injured in the one-car accident.

Massachusetts State Trooper Paul Malestesta, who investigated the 3:55 accident, said it occurred while the Van Heuven car was going north on Route 5, a tenth of a mile north of Hatfield.

Police said that the vehicle appeared to have swerved out of the northbound lane, crossed into the southbound lane and then on to the west shoulder of the road, where it traveled for 42 feet before striking a tree head on. There was no immediate explanation as to why the machine suddenly left the road.

Mr. Adams was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Kenneth H. Rice of Deerfield, medical examiner.

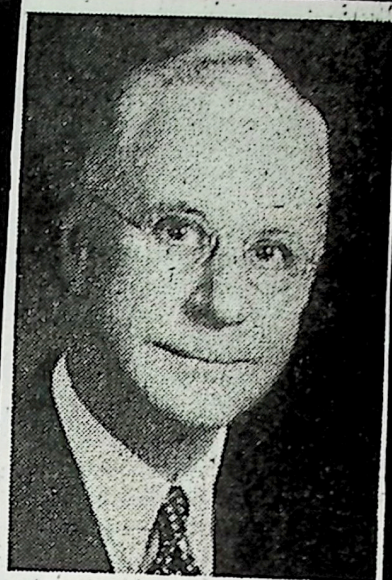

Driver on Danger List

Treated at the scene by Dr. R. C. Bryon of Hatfield, the driver was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital, Northampton. Dr. Van Heuven's name was still on the danger list today. He received severe chest and head injuries.

Mr. Adams had gone to Hamden, Conn., Thursday for a brief visit in the home of his daughter, Mrs. James W. Boyden, and to keep an appointment with Dr. Van Heuven, an eye specialist. The latter was en route to Chester yesterday.

Mr. Adams was born in Brattleboro Jan. 31, 1879, one of the seven children of Leroy F. and Ella H. (Crosby) Adams. He started his banking career two months after graduating from Brattleboro High School in 1896. First employed as a messenger at the Peoples National Bank, he was made a teller in 1906 and assistant cashier in 1917.

After 21 years of service at the Peoples Bank, Mr. Adams was elected treasurer of the Vermont Savings Bank in November, 1917.

FREDERIC C. ADAMS

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1960

Frederic C. Adams

For more than 60 years—64, to be exact—Frederic C. Adams had been associated with Brattleboro banking institutions—a term long enough to build an acquaintance all over the territory these banks serve as well as an intimate knowledge of local banking history. Yet in his case a wide variety of other interests contributed to the long and full life so suddenly terminated last Friday—a life in which public service of various sorts combined with indulgence in numerous rewarding hobbies gave its possessor something to live for up to the very end. To all his friends as well as to his family the manner of his death was a shock but they can find some comfort in the fact that it was without the suffering so often the accompaniment of one's declining years.

To Fred Adams the business with which he had been connected since his graduation from High School in 1896 was but one of a number of occupations. A talented craftsman in wood and metal, he found constant pleasure in his basement workshop. He was likewise a skilled photographer. Up to a few years ago he had specialized in stamp collecting, which turned out to be a profitable as well as an absorbing avocation. He possessed a fine baritone voice that gave himself and others pleasure in churches throughout the county as well as in oldtime amateur theatricals. He was an ardent trout fisherman too, and in his earlier years had tramped old trails now all but gone from the countryside.

With these and other interests to engage his methodical mind and provide an outlet for his diversified talents, it can be said of Fred Adams by one who had been a close friend since childhood that his life was full, and his violent death, in such rude contrast to his precisely ordered daily pattern, was at least mercifully quick.

Mrs. F. C. Adams, 75, Dies at Her Home 1956

Mrs. Ruth (Hunt) Adams, 75, wife of Frederic C. Adams, longtime official of the Vermont Savings Bank, died at 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon at 10 Tyler Street, where she and Mr. Adams had made their home since 1905, following a long illness.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Dickinson-Streeter Funeral Home tomorrow at 2 p.m. by Rev. Harry Poole of Hamden, Conn., a former neighbor. Burial will be in Meetinghouse Hill Cemetery in the spring. In place of flowers friends are requested to make contributions to Mrs. H. C. Rice for use in connection with the day camp shelter at Living Memorial Park.

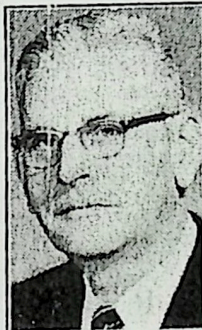

Born in Camden, N. J., Dec. 27, 1880, the oldest of six children of Frank L. and Harriet (Newton) Hunt, Mrs. Adams came to Brattleboro when a child and had made her home here ever since, graduating from Brattleboro High School in the class of 1899 and working for several years in the office of the Smith & Hunt Co., of which her father was manager. Her marriage to Mr. Adams took place May 7, 1902 and the couple celebrated its golden wedding on that date in 1952. Devoted to her home and children, Mrs. Adams nevertheless had a wide circle of friends, and until ill health prevented, found her greatest pleasures in doing kind things for others.

Besides her husband she leaves two children, Lyman C. Adams of this town and Mrs. James Boyden of Hamden, Conn., five grandchildren and three sisters, Mrs. Albert H. Hunt of Nashua, N. H., Mrs. Ellen Greene of Brattleboro and Miss Gertrude Hunt of Palm Springs, Calif.

Largely attended funeral services for Mrs. Ruth (Hunt) Adams, wife of Frederic C. Adams, Vermont Savings Bank official, who died Monday afternoon at her home at 10 Tyler Street, were held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Dickinson-Streeter Funeral Home. Rev. Harry Poole, pastor of Grace Episcopal Church, Hamden, Conn., a former neighbor, officiated. Mrs. George A. Boyden was organist. Burial will be in the spring in Meetinghouse Hill Cemetery. A large delegation was present from the savings bank. Among those who attended from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. James W. Boyden and Mrs. Harry Poole of Hamden, Conn., Mr. and Mrs. George Adams of Longmeadow, Mass., Dr. and Mrs. George Schadt of Springfield, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hunt and Mrs. Robert Moran of Nashua, N. H., Mr. and Mrs. Paul Meade of Shelburne Falls, Mass., Stuart Duncan of Scotia, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. Norman Cotton of Keene, N. H., and Albert F. Marshall and Romaine Morse, Jr., of Springfield. Relatives and friends were also present from Newfane and Dummerston.

MARLBORO.

Death of Henry Adams.

Henry Adams, 73, who had been a life-long resident of Marlboro with the exception of a few years in middle life, died Monday morning in his home in that town. His health had failed rapidly during the past winter and he had been confined to his bed about three weeks. Death was due to a general breaking down incident to old age. Throughout his long life he had been a hard working man and until his last illness his activity had been remarkable for a man of his years.

He was born in Marlboro Dec. 27, 1833, and was one of the 11 children of Simeon and Mary A. (Sargent) Adams. He lived on a farm in Marlboro until past middle age, when he went to West Halifax to work in a tannery. Afterwards he worked in tanneries in Winchester, Troy and Newport, N. H., for brief periods and about 25 years ago returned to Marlboro, where he had since carried on the farm on which he died. Although he was keenly interested in what happened in the town and went to town meetings regularly he never took an active part in politics and never accepted any town office.

He married Miss Ann Winchester, daughter of Clark A. Winchester, Oct. 6, 1857, in Marlboro. She died in 1870. Three children were born to them, Lizzie Ann, wife of Freeman Scott of Brattleboro, John C. Adams, who lives on a farm in Marlboro, and Mary, who died when young. Mr. Adams married Nov. 12, 1872, Mrs. Ellen (Thompson) Fowler of West Halifax. Two children were born of this marriage, Lottie L., wife of Clarence Worden of Long Island City, N. Y., and Miss Luise Adams of New York. Besides his wife Mr. Adams leaves three sisters, Mrs. Lucy Higley and Mrs. Hannah Mather of Marlboro, Mrs. Mary Ann Higley of Guilford and three brothers, Simeon Adams of Rindge, N. He boarded with Mrs. W. H. Underwood, across the street from the Harris home, ate his supper as usual and visited LeRay's store in the evening.

For the last few years Mr. Adkins's life has been one of a quiet, mellow, serene age, though he was often on the street, showing his old-time interest in all the best activities of the day. It required some resolution and effort, at his advanced age of about 95, to take an active part in the late presidential election; but he was there, giving continued proof of his life-long interest in his country's weal. Indeed, for all that pertained to the good of humanity, whether in the village school or academy, church or society, he always had a quick eye and a warm hand, being ever ready to do all that his strength and means would allow. In the prime of his life he was a good singer, and for many years led the choir in the church where he worshiped, morning, afternoon and evening. Most of the able, Christian men with whom he was actively associated, Judge

Clark, Deacons Hayes, Carpenter, Warriner, Grout, Preceptor Harris, Messrs. Samson, Herrick, Crosby, two Smiths, two Dunklees, and others, departed all long ago for the "better coun-old-time plain, honest, warm-hearted, urbane, sensible, plain, honest, warm-hearted, urbane, cheerful, courtly. Nor did he fail to keep himself well up and abreast with all that was good in the new, ever in living touch with the incoming generations. The funeral services were held at his late home, being conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. H. Babbitt, assisted by Rev. Lewis Grout.

In 1951, after the installation of the communist dictatorship in Romania, Dennis fled Romania for Greece. After a stay in a refugee camp on the island of Lesbos, he settled in Athens, where he practiced urology for six years. In 1957, Dennis immigrated to the United States under a program for refugees of the Cold War. Dennis lived and worked first in New York City and then in Brattleboro, Vermont, where he met his future wife Georgia-Lee and her children, Donald and Susan.

In Urbana, Dennis made himself part of the warm and welcoming communities at Clark-Lindsey Village and at Three Hierarchs Greek Orthodox Church. He read several newspapers a day, including the New York Times, Wall Street Journal and a daily Greek-language paper, and he often had a newspaper clipping at the ready for a friend or relative who he thought might be interested in a particular topic. He was a warm and generous friend and a loving and doting father and Pappou. He will be sorely missed.

DUMMERSTON.

Edward Dorr Aiken.

APR 22 1900
Prominent Pioneer Settler of Montana,
Formerly a Citizen of Dummerston.

The writer of this sketch was well acquainted with E. Dorr Aiken as a clerk in the store of Randolph A. Knight at Dummerston Centre during the summer of 1863. Mr. Knight was absent at that time in Des Moines, Iowa, where he was engaged in the mercantile business, and had left Mr. Aiken in charge of the store in Dummerston to sell the goods on hand when Mr. Knight went to Iowa in 1862. Sometime during the summer of 1863, Calvin Keyes of Putney, who was then a merchant in Des Moines, came East and bought the remaining stock in the store and shipped the goods to Iowa.

In September, 1863, Mr. Aiken went to Des Moines and was employed in the store of Mr. Knight until 1864, when he emigrated to Montana. For several years he was in business with a company engaged in driving a tunnel under Iron mountain. From 1871 to 1878 he was engaged in the mining business. In 1880 he became part owner in a foundry at Butte City, making heavy castings for machinery used in the mines, and continued in the business until 1895, when he retired on account of ill health, caused by asthma.

As a Mason, he was prominently known throughout Montana and held the highest honors in that order within the gift of the state. In 1871 and 1872 he was a member of the seventh session of the territorial legislature, which convened at Virginia City, and thus was instrumental in helping to frame the territorial laws of Montana. He was chosen a member of the eighth, or extraordinary session, held at Virginia City in 1873. In 1881 he was a member of the twelfth session of the territorial council held at Helena. In 1889 he was chosen a member of the constitutional convention which framed the constitution under which Montana was admitted to the Union as a state. The people of Montana had confidence in him as a good and true man, and characterized him as having "sterling qualities." In this instance it evidently means genuine manliness. He was much respected for his words of kindly sympathy and neighborly spirit.

Mr. Aiken was the son of Edward and Philinda (Stiles) Aiken, and was born in Londonderry, Vt., July 6, 1838. His parents lived in Dummerston many years and their burial was in West Dummerston. His grandparents were William and Nancy (Witherspoon) Aiken of Londonderry. Captain Edward Aiken was his great-grandfather, who, with 18 other persons, was an original settler of that town in 1774. The ancestors of these first settlers were Scotch Presbyterians from the North of Ireland, who emigrated to America in 1738.

Dorr Aiken Married April 20, 1882, Miss Ada M. Rodgers, daughter of Captain W. H. Rodgers of Missoula. His death occurred on Sunday morning, April 22, 1900, in his 62d year. His wife survives him. William Aiken, his brother, is still living in Dummerston, and is a veteran of the Civil war. Nancy, his sister, is the wife of Henry Stockwell, who lives in West Brattleboro.

CLARK BARNEY AKELEY.

AUG 28 1910

Civil War Veteran Who Was Wounded by Mosby's Guerrillas Died Sunday Morning of Organic Heart Disease.

Clark Barney Akeley, 75, a descendant of one of the early settlers of Brattleboro, a Civil war veteran and formerly an employe at the Vinton paper mill, died about 1 o'clock Sunday morning in his home at 11 Reed street. He had been in ill health about a year with organic heart disease and since early this year his condition had been more serious. Mr. Akeley was born in this town Nov. 3, 1834, and was one of four children of Lifus and Luthera (Cutting) Akeley. His grandfather, Thomas Akeley, came from Dedham, Mass., and his first stopping place was in a cave-like recess in the rocks in the western part of the town. Later he married and his family lived in a log house which he built in West Brattleboro. Seven children were born in that rude home. Subsequently Thomas Akeley built a frame house, and there seven more children were born to him. The youngest was Lifus, father of Clark B. Akeley.

Lifus Akeley and family moved to Pennsylvania in 1847, going by way of the old Erie canal. They arrived in Buffalo before the steam cars ran west from that city. They journeyed 80 miles to the lumber regions of Pennsylvania, and Clark B. Akeley, who was then 13 years old, spent the rest of his boyhood there. From one of the big pine trees which he cut was sawed six 16-foot logs, one 12-foot log and one 10-foot log. In 1855 the family returned to Vermont, settling in Somerset, but five years later they returned to West Brattleboro.

While living there Mr. Akeley enlisted Jan. 13, 1862, in Company H, 8th Vermont Regiment, of which Henry F. Dutton was captain. He was wounded June 22, while seated in a train 75 miles northwest of New Orleans, from which city he went out with a reconnoitering expedition. A company of Mosby's guerrillas fired on the train from ambush and several shot crashed through the car window, and struck Mr. Akeley on the right side of his head, piercing his ear. The shot never were extracted. Mr. Akeley was blind until September. He was discharged Oct. 1, 1862, and he returned and settled in this village, securing employment in the Vinton paper mill, where he remained upwards of 25 consecutive years. Afterwards he did jobbing for himself until ill health made it necessary for him to give up work about a year ago. He suffered much from the gunshot wound received in the war.

On April 7, 1870, Mr. Akeley married, in Brattleboro, Miss Eliza Knight, of Putney, daughter of Perry and Elizabeth (Fairbanks) Knight. She survives with two sons, Arthur D. Akeley and Lester C. Akeley, both of this town. Mr. Akeley leaves one brother, Jotham E. Akeley of Leominster, Mass. Funeral services were held in the home Tuesday at 2 o'clock. Rev. F. A. Wells, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated and the burial was in Prospect Hill cemetery. The bearers were members of Sedgwick post, G. A. R.

Alderman Boy Dies in Crash On Abbott Rd.

Two Other Youths Hurt; Convertible Dives Into Field

David C. Alderman, Jr., 15, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Alderman of New England Drive, was almost instantly killed about 1:45 Thursday afternoon when the convertible in which he was riding went out of control on Abbott Road in West Brattleboro and turned over. Cause of death was given as a fractured skull.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the Ker Funeral Home. Burial will be in Meetinghouse Hill Cemetery. Visiting hours at the funeral home are from 7 to 9 o'clock tonight.

IT WAS the 61st highway fatality in Vermont this year, one less than the 1954 total, and the first in Brattleboro since March 16, 1954.

The victim, along with Howard Matthews, 16, of Putney Road, the owner and driver, and Harold Warwick, 18, of Western Avenue, were thrown clear of the open vehicle as it rolled at least once and came to rest on its wheels, the front on the road and the back in a field.

Matthews and Warwick were removed to Memorial Hospital in the emergency vehicle and treated for slight injuries by Dr. John R. Malloy and released. The driver had a bump on his head and Warwick a shoulder injury and both were shaken up.

POLICE SAID, and tire tracks indicated, that Matthews apparently lost control as he came off a slight curve on the dirt road. He swerved to the left ditch, then slewed across the road and went half way into the field before the car rolled over.

Alderman was born in Brattleboro July 4, 1940, the son of David C. and Ruby (Brettell) Alderman.

All three boys attended Brattleboro High School. Alderman was to be a sophomore, Matthews will be a junior and Warwick will be a senior. The dead boy had been a member of the band and orchestra and of the tennis squad.

Dr. Malloy was called as medical examiner and State's Atty. John S. Burgess released the body to Ker Funeral Home.

The crash was investigated by Police Chief Richard B. Putnam, Sgt. William Wheelock and Officer John Wheelden.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in the Ker Funeral Home. Rev. Robert J. Harding officiated. Byron C. Leach was organist. Burial was in Meetinghouse Hill Cemetery. Bearers, all members of the Brattleboro High School Band, were James C. Irish, Jr., William Curtin, David Hodge, Stephen Barre, John Wheeler and Robert Luke. Classmates attended in a body. Also present were representatives of the management of the American Optical Co. Relatives who attended from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. Norman Brettell and Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Brettell, all of Melrose, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brettell of Lynnfield, Mass.

Eugene H. Akley, 52, a man who held the respect and trust of people in a remarkable degree, died in his home early this morning after suffering about eight weeks with blood poisoning. His illness began two weeks after he bruised one hand slightly. Henry Akley, 71, one of Brattleboro's most successful farmers, died at his home in West Brattleboro about 2.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon after an illness of five days with apoplexy. On Friday afternoon of last week Mr. Akley was stricken while cutting wood in the lot above his house. An employe was with him, but it was an hour before he succeeded in getting help. Mr. Akley had not lost his senses and although he could not speak he directed the course over which he wanted to be taken home. He retained consciousness until about 3 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The funeral will be held at the house at 2 o'clock today. Rev. Mr. Morse, pastor of the Baptist church in Hale, officiating, and the burial will be in the family lot in West Brattleboro.

Mr. Akley was born in Northfield, Mass., March 13, 1830, and was one of eight children of Almus and Harriet Fessenden Akley. He moved with his parents to West Brattleboro when he was about two years old and his home during the rest of his life was on the old farm which has borne the Akley name for more than 100 years. He carried a stock of from 40 to 50 head of cattle and owned real estate in West Brattleboro, Guilford, Newfane, Hinsdale and Vernon. In addition to his business as a farmer he engaged actively in brick-making on several occasions and had had brick yards in West Brattleboro, one near the Samuel Sargent place, and in Hinsdale, N. H., and Montague, Mass. For several terms Mr. Akley was honored by election to the office of selectman, and he also had held other town offices, including those of highway surveyor and overseer of the poor.

Mr. Akley married Florinda Church of West Brattleboro about 46 years ago. They had three children, two of whom, Eugene Akley and Mrs. J. T. Wright of Vernon, survive. His second wife, who was Mrs. Lucy Butterfield, of West Brattleboro, also survives. Mr. Akley leaves a brother, Edson Akley, of West Brattleboro, and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Clisbee of West Brattleboro and Mrs. Henry Wilcutt of Brattleboro. He also leaves three grandchildren. He was a man of strict integrity, faithful to every trust, ready and willing to aid in any possible way. By his death the town loses an honored citizen.

MRS. LUCY AKLEY, 92, DIES, Feb. 13, 1902

Was Daughter of Eli and Sally (Carter) Miller—Never Had Any Organical Illness—Funeral Yesterday.

Mrs. Lucy S. Akley, 92, died at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the home of her son, Walbridge G. Horton of 67 Canal street.

Mrs. Akley was the daughter of Eli and Sally (Carter) Miller and was born in West Brattleboro March 28, 1831, on the place known as the John Cutting farm, near the Copeland sawmill. She moved from there when very young with her parents to the farm then known as the Herrick farm, in district 10, West Brattleboro.

She married Jonathan Horton, a neighbor, in April, 1847. He died July 7, 1873. They had seven children—five sons and two daughters—Susan B. William G., Delia A., Walbridge G., George Dwight, Milo J. and Edmund B., all of whom survive except Susan B., who died Sept. 29, 1890 in New Haven, Conn., and Edmund B., who died Feb. 10, 1902, in Boston. She also leaves 12 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Of the children living, George Dwight is in Orange, Mass.; Milo J., in Enfield, Conn.; and Delia A., wife of Henry A. Stockwell, William G. and Walbridge G., in Brattleboro.

Lucy S. Horton for her second husband married Judge B. T. Butterfield of Wilmington, Sept. 12, 1877. He died May 1, 1887. She married Henry Akley of West Brattleboro March 25, 1891. He died Jan. 15, 1902. After the death of Mr. Akley she made her home with her son, Walbridge G. Horton, until her death.

Mrs. Akley was a wonderfully well preserved woman. She did not employ a physician for over 70 years except at the birth of her children, and the last 20 years she had a physician only when she had a severe cold, and then only by the persuasion of her children. She never had any organic disease of any kind. Last August she fell and fractured her left hip, which compelled her to remain in bed for over eight weeks, after which she recovered and was able to go about the house with a cane, but she never recovered the health which she enjoyed before the accident. Her death was due to a general breaking down, because of her advanced age.

She was the last of nine children. Her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Nelson Willard, died March 13, 1918, at the age of nearly 91.

Mrs. Akley was of a happy disposition, giving cheer to her many friends who came to see her, always looking on the bright side of life and giving comfort to many. When she was about 17 years of age she made a profession of faith in the Saviour by baptism by immersion. She always lived a Christian life, but never united with any church.

The funeral was held in the Horton home at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Rev. Dr. Herbert P. Woodin, pastor of the Centre Congregational church, officiating. Mr. and Mrs. George P. Miller of Guilford sang Face to Face, and Sometime We'll Understand. The body was entombed at Prospect Hill cemetery, to await burial next spring in the Richardson cemetery in West Brattleboro. The bearers were Harold L. Smith and Louis A. Ginn of this town, Luther Horton of Orange, Mass., and Clyde W. Horton of Burlington. Others who came from out of town to attend the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Milo J. Horton of Enfield, Conn., Mrs. Luther Horton and Mrs. Mary Haus of Orange and Mrs. Gullie Ladue of Baldwinville, Mass.

Death of Ezra Ames.

Ezra Ames, 79, died Saturday night in the home on Ames hill where he had lived the past 54 years. Mr. Ames was taken ill about eight weeks ago with heart disease and for seven weeks had been confined to the bed. He was known to be in a critical condition. Until taken with his last illness he had been in apparent good health for a man of his age and was able to do more than most men at his time of life. Ames hill, on which he had spent the greater part of his life, was named after his relatives of an older generation.

Mr. Ames was born in Putney July 15, 1828, and was the son of Ezra and Sibyl (Harris) Ames. His father died when he was a child and his only sister died at the age of seven. After his father's death he and his mother came to West Brattleboro to live with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Harris. Mr. Ames attended the district schools and the academy, of which his uncle, Roswell Harris, was then preceptor. After graduation from the academy he taught school a few years in Marlboro and Dummerston and then engaged in carpentering several years before buying the farm on Ames hill. His wife, who was Hannah Mather, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Mather of Marlboro, died in November, 1905.

Mr. Ames was one of the best known farmers in town and had carried on the large farm successfully many years, turning the active management over to his son, William H. Ames, in great measure in late years. He was a hard worker, conscientious and of unquestioned integrity. Although he had never held any town office, he had served the school district No. 9, in the old district school days, in various official capacities. He had never allied himself with any church or organization but had attended the Marlboro Congregational church. He is the last survivor of his father's family and the only other near relatives besides the son are his daughter, Mrs. Joseph Johnson, and four grandchildren.

The funeral was held in the home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. H. H. Shaw, pastor of the Marlboro Congregational church, officiated and the body was taken to Marlboro for burial.

July 24 James W. Austin, 1904

James W. Austin, 34, for the past few years clerk at the Brattleboro House, died about 9 o'clock Friday night at the Farren hospital in Montague, Mass. He was stricken with paralysis on Wednesday, July 13, after an illness of several days, and on Sunday he was taken to the hospital. He became unconscious Tuesday morning and did not regain consciousness. Mr. Austin was born in Brattleboro January 2, 1870, and was a son of John and Margaret (Bowler) Austin. He graduated from the Brattleboro high school in 1888, and for a time after that he was a clerk in the Pullen grocery store. Then he was employed in the Carpenter organ factory, where he remained until he went to the hotel. He was the last survivor of the Austin family, his nearest relatives being two nephews and a niece, Edward, Patrick and Katherine Baker of Somerville, Mass., two uncles, Martin and James Austin of Brattleboro, and an aunt, Mrs. Honora Long of Joplin, Mo.

The body was taken to his late home at 16 Canal street Saturday, and on Monday morning at 9 o'clock the funeral was held in St. Michael's Roman Catholic church, Rev. Patrick Cunningham officiating. The burial was in the Roman Catholic cemetery, the bearers being John J. Austin, Thomas A. Austin, Martin Austin, Jr., John J. Grady, J. T. Denning and G. H. Danyew. A delegation from the Vermont Wheel club attended the funeral. There were many floral remembrances.

Among those who attended the funeral from out of town were P. M. Baker and sons, Edward and Patrick, of Somerville, and Harry Flood, Charles Houston and Joseph Donoghue of Holyoke, former clerks at the Brattleboro House.

To people who knew the Austin family not more than 18 years ago, when father, mother, three daughters and son were living, the death of James, the last of all, comes with peculiar sadness. The family was one which maintained in an exceptional degree the cordial and intimate relations which are a fine part of life, and in addition the home was a place of hospitality and good cheer for all who visited it. James Austin was cheery, warm hearted and generous and these qualities and his readiness and originality in repartee made him a welcome and cheerful visitor in any circle in which he joined. Those who knew him well will always have a kindly and pleasant memory of him.

Death of George W. Ames. 1910

George W. Ames, 71, of Marlboro, brother of Charles Ames and Mrs. A. M. Prouty of this village, died Wednesday of pneumonia. Mr. Ames was one of the foremost men of Marlboro. He had served in nearly every town office and for many years he had been first selectman. With the exception of a short time when he lived in Brattleboro he had always lived in Marlboro, where he carried on the same farm 40 years, meeting with financial success. His integrity and good judgment made him much sought as an administrator of estates and for positions of public and private trust. Mr. Ames was born Dec. 20, 1838, and was the son of Almon and Sallie (Higley) Ames. He attended the public schools of the town and worked on his father's farm as a boy and young man. He married Miss Ellen Mather Jan. 5, 1870. She died five years later, and about 19 years ago Mr. Ames married Hannah Thomas, who survives. Besides his brother and sister in Brattleboro he leaves a brother, William C. Ames of Hudson, Mich. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in the home. Rev. H. H. Shaw will officiate and the burial will be in Morning-side cemetery, Brattleboro.

Born Sept. 14, 1910, daughter of Charles E. and Effie M. Metcalf Pearson.

Edith was predeceased by five brothers, Robert, Charles, Ernest, Howard and Kenneth Pearson; four sisters Ione Hunt, Jessie Streeter, Lillian Mansfield, and Mary Wilkens.

She was the devoted wife of the late William F. Aldrich. Edith was also predeceased by three sons, Frank E. Aldrich, Richard E. Aldrich and James K. Aldrich.

Edith leaves a son, William Robert Aldrich, and daughter-in-law, Rena B. Aldrich of Hyannis, Mass., daughter-in-law Ann Aldrich of Montpelier. She also leaves seven grandchildren, Judith Allen, of New York City, Bradley Aldrich of Montpelier, Barry Aldrich of East Burke, Lori Aldrich of Richmond, Mark Aldrich of New Paltz, N.Y., Michelle Aldrich of Hyannis, Mass., and Yu Peter Aldrich of Newport News, Va., eight great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Edith had been a life-long resident of South Londonderry until January 2009 when she went to the Gill Odd Fellows Home in Ludlow to live. She had been employed as a telephone operator at the South Londonderry Telephone Operations Office until the conversion to dial operations in the 50's. She followed that up as a clerk in the South Londonderry Library for a number of years. Edith assisted in care giving for two elderly ladies in the neighborhood for several years.

Edith loved her family and friends and kept in close touch by telephone and letter writing. Her interests were many and filled her life. She knitted, crocheted and quilted. She made countless mittens, scarves, baby blankets for charities. She prepared and kept scrapbooks containing such items as greeting cards, notes, newspaper clippings, pictures of family and friends, collected over the years.

Edith had been very proud of her flower garden on the hill behind the house, which reflected her loving and caring work. Her gardens were always the envy of all.

She loved to read everything and kept informed of all events locally and globally. She kept abreast of everything in the world. She loved her TV — John Wayne movies, to the quietness of golf tournaments, and the Atlanta Braves baseball team. She would say that she remembered them when they were in Boston but in reality for a long time they were the only team shown on TV in South Londonderry.

Edith loved the birds that found their way to the front yard of her home to be fed, especially the hummingbirds but had a severe dislike of the Baltimore Orioles and crows.

Edith endured the grief of outliving her husband, three sons and all the rest of her siblings. These events took their toll on her, the latest being the loss of her beloved niece, Sylvia Newell. Her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren gave her great happiness. She will be missed by everyone who knew her.

In lieu of flowers, a contribution to the Londonderry Rescue Squad would be appreciated.

FUNERAL NOTICE: Visiting hours will be Wednesday June 24th 6 to 8 p.m. at the ADAMS-KENNY FUNERAL HOME in Chester and graveside burial services will be conducted Thursday June 25th at 11 a.m. at the Glebeview Cemetery in South Londonderry.

J. EVERETT ALDEN DIES.

Former Brattleboro Resident Was Civil War Veteran of Prominence, Survivor of Andersonville. Dec 9, 1921

News has been received here of the death in Torrington, Conn., late in November of J. Everett Alden, 82, formerly of Brattleboro, commander of L. W. Steele post, G. A. R., a veteran of Company F, 4th Vermont Volunteers, who frequently came to Brattleboro to attend the reunions of the survivors in that company. He had been in failing health about a year, but was able to get about until a few weeks ago, when he sustained a shock of paralysis. He was vice president of the Connecticut State Veterans' association, an aide de camp on the staff of the national commander, G. A. R., president of the Company F. association, member of the National Association of Andersonville Survivors, the 4th Vermont regimental association, and the Army and Navy club. He attended several national conventions of the G. A. R. and most of the reunions of the 4th Vermont regiment.

On the occasion of the last reunion of his regiment a short time ago his comrades, remembering him in his absence, telephoned to him from Vermont, each member giving him a message of cheer over the wire. After being discharged in 1865 Mr. Alden returned to Brattleboro and resumed his trade, but later he went to Springfield, Mass., and while there took a position in the postal service which led to his becoming a railway mail clerk and afterwards assistant postmaster at Torrington.

INJURIES WERE FATAL

Capt. Harrison Aldrich Died in South Newfane Sunday

Sept 5 — 1909

Was Successful Commission Merchant and Member Boston Chamber of Commerce—Resident of Somerville.

Injuries received by Capt. Harrison Aldrich, 68, in Williamsville Friday morning, as told in The Phoenix that day, resulted fatally at his home in South Newfane Sunday afternoon at about 2.45 o'clock. He appeared to be somewhat better Saturday and hope of his recovery was entertained, but about 3 o'clock Sunday morning he became worse and failed until the end. Heart failure was the direct cause of death.

Capt. Aldrich started for the Williamsville railroad station Friday morning with his son-in-law, William Dole of Lawrence, Mass., who had been visiting in South Newfane, Mr. Dole intending to take the train for home. On a box seat in the rear of the buckboard rode Mr. Dole's two children. When near G. R. Temple's house between the village and the station the horse started to run for some reason which has not been learned. While going down the hill near the watering trough one side of the buckboard ran into the gutter and both wheels on that side broke down, throwing the four occupants heavily to the ground. The horse continued to the station and stopped on the railroad track.

It was found that Capt. Aldrich was badly injured internally and about the head, causing hemorrhages. He was taken to the home of Mr. Temple and Dr. P. P. White of Williamsville was summoned. Dr. White did everything possible for the injured man. Capt. Aldrich was taken to his own home that day.

Capt. Harrison Aldrich was born in Williamsville Sept. 18, 1840, and was a son of Daniel T. and Laura (Whipple) Aldrich. He came of old Revolutionary stock. His boyhood days were spent on his father's farm and he attended the district schools of his native town and Powers Institute in Bernardston. He taught in district schools and was teaching in Petersham, Mass., when the Civil war broke out. He gave up his school and enlisted in Company K, 21st Massachusetts Volunteers. He served as private, sergeant, lieutenant and captain and participated in the battles of Roanoke Island, Newbern, Camden, Second Bull Run, Chantilly, Antietam and Fredericksburg, being wounded at Newbern. The arduous service of the regiment causing its reduction in numbers and its consolidation with the 36th regiment, Capt. Aldrich resigned his commission, received an honorable discharge and returned to his native town, where he married Helen Louisa Morse, daughter of Benjamin E. and Mary (Howe) Morse.

In 1866 Capt. Aldrich went to Boston and entered the employ of A. M. Aldrich, a butter and cheese dealer, at the market, where he remained 10 years, being a member of the firm a part of the time. He next established himself in the produce business and had a store on South Market street. Later he was a commission merchant on State street. The firm formerly was Harrison, Aldrich & Co. Capt. Aldrich sold his interest to his partner and formed the Hilton-Aldrich Co. on South Market street, of which he was treasurer. A few years later he withdrew from the firm, and since then he had not been actively engaged except as treasurer of the Alfred H. Aldrich Co. of 45 Chatham street.

Since 1880 Capt. Aldrich had lived in Somerville. Soon after moving there he bought land in an undeveloped part of the city, laid out a new street which was named after him and started development in that section by building several modern houses. His example was followed by others until the entire section was built upon. Subsequently he bought land and built a handsome residence at 23 Franklin street, Somerville, where he had since lived, spending his summers at his summer home in South Newfane. He served in the Somerville common council in 1884 and 1885 and was a member of the board of aldermen in 1886 and 1887. He was the first captain of Company M, Somerville light infantry, when it was organized many years ago. He was a member of Soley lodge, F. & A. M., post 139, G. A. R., Somerville chapter, R. A. M., the Loyal Legion and the Boston chamber of commerce. Besides his wife Capt. Aldrich leaves one daughter, Mrs. William Dole of Lawrence.

Capt. Aldrich was a man of sterling character, congenial among strangers as well as acquaintances, full of energy and prominent in every walk of life. He was successful in business through adherence to inborn principles of honesty and fairness, and in his public positions he manifested the same zeal for the best interests of the people that characterized his conduct of his own business. He was bound to his family by strong ties of love and devotion, and he will be missed by a very wide circle of friends and associates in Somerville, Boston, his native town and elsewhere. He was an enthusiastic agriculturist, fisherman and hunter.

Funeral services were held in the Baptist church in South Newfane Wednesday at 10 o'clock, Rev. O. E. Clark, the pastor, officiating, and the church choir sang. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Wyman, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Aldrich of Eoston, Norman Wheeler of Springfield, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. William Goodnow of North Cambridge, Mass., E. M. Dexter and John Lewis Morse of Philadelphia, besides members of Sedgwick post of Brattleboro and a large number of residents and summer visitors. There were many beautiful floral remembrances. The burial was in the family lot in Williamsville, where the service was conducted by the members of Sedgwick post.

No 5 Mrs. Jerome A. Amidon. 1904

Mary E. Amidon, 52, wife of Jerome A. Amidon, died at 3.15 o'clock yesterday morning at her home at 19 Central street. On May 29 Mrs. Amidon sustained an apoplectic shock, but she regained her strength in large measure and appeared to be doing well when, on Tuesday of last week, she sank into a comatose condition, due to a leakage at the base of the brain as a result of the shock in May, and from this condition she did not rally except for brief intervals. Mrs. Amidon was born in South Newfane Nov. 10, 1854. Her maiden name was Mary E. Lamson and she was the only child of David J. and Cynthia (Phillips) Lamson. At the age of seven years she came to Brattleboro, and her home was in this town until she was 20 years old. From then until 1880 she lived in New York. In that year she returned to Brattleboro, and on June 20, 1882, she was married to Jerome A. Amidon. For 15 years following 1880 she was employed by the Estey Organ company, in the valve department. In 1883 Mrs. Amidon joined Dennis Rebekah lodge, and her work for the interest of that lodge was almost without a parallel. She was secretary when she was taken ill, having held the office many years, and she was past noble grand and one of the best loved and most faithful members of the lodge. She also was past president of the ladies' aid society of the Universalist church. She was one of the most congenial and companionable of women, and the spirit of neighborliness and kindness with which she was imbued manifested itself continually. In her home life she was bound by ties of tender devotion. Besides her husband she is survived by her step-mother, Mrs. Esther M. Lamson of Cato, N. Y., a half brother, Lloyd J. Lamson of Syracuse, N. Y., a machinist, and two half sisters, Miss Grace Lamson, a nurse in Syracuse, and Miss Florence Lamson of Brookline, Mass., formerly of Brattleboro and a well known school teacher. The funeral will be held at the house at 2 o'clock tomorrow, Rev. Frank L. Masseck, pastor of the Universalist church, officiating. The burial will be in Prospect Hill cemetery. The members of Dennis Rebekah lodge will attend the funeral together.

The funeral of Mrs. Jerome A. Amidon was held at her late home on Central street at 2 o'clock Saturday and was largely attended. The members of Dennis Rebekah lodge attended in a body and besides them many friends and neighbors were present. There were many beautiful floral remembrances. Rev. Frank L. Masseck, pastor of the Universalist church, officiated and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Maynard sang two songs. The burial was in Prospect Hill cemetery. The bearers were A. J. Currier, W. T. Halgh, E. S. Hall, A. W. Rockwell, Eric Landry and A. W. Roel. Those present from out of town were Mrs. Esther M. Lamson of Cato, N. Y., Lloyd J. DEATH OF G. G. ALLEN. Vx PLY

A useful citizen and a strong, upright man passed away on Wednesday afternoon in the death of George G. Allen, after a painful illness of many months. Mr. Allen was a native of Whitingham, born in 1820. His father was one of five brothers, who were early settlers in Deerfield, Mass. Two of the brothers went to northern Vermont, while Mr. Allen's father settled in Whitingham about the year 1785, and raised there a family of 11 children, of whom George G. was one of the elder. As a boy and youth he worked on his father's farm until he was 20 years old, going then to Westminster, where he learned the trade of a wheelwright, and followed that business for several years. He first came to Brattleboro in 1853, working for the organ company in the old Valley Mill building, and was afterward employed by the Asa Miller carriage company. In 1856 he established a milk route on the Hinsdale farm now owned by J. H. Pratt, which he carried on for four years. April 1st, 1860, he returned to Brattleboro, moving on to the Canal street farm where he has since lived and on which he died. During the war he had the contract for the milk supply at the barracks and hospital on the old camp ground. He afterwards established a children's carriage business with the late H. P. Green, in the building now occupied by G. B. Kirwan, following this occupation for several years. He was a man in whose integrity, ability and good judgment his fellow citizens had great confidence, and between the years 1870 and 1885 he held at various times offices of selectman, road commissioner and village bailiff. For the past five years, until entirely disabled by sickness, he has given his time to his farm. In the winter of 1890, while assisting in binding a load of hay, the pole gave way and he was thrown to the ground in such a way that he barely escaped dislocation of the neck, and sustained internal injuries from which he never recovered, and which finally caused his death.

In 1843 Mr. Allen married Elmira Carpenter of Westminster, who survives him. Four children were born to them, two of whom are now living—Mrs. P. F. Crown of Jacksonville, and C. E. Allen, who has built up on the home farm a successful business as a florist and gardener which has few equals in extent in New England. Two brothers and a sister of the Allen family—E. S. Allen of Jacksonville, who lives at the old homestead, J. M. Allen, who is now in Minneapolis, and Mrs. Hannah Thayer of Hampden, Mass., now remain.

In his qualities of sturdy uprightness, native intelligence and sound common-sense Mr. Allen was a typical New Englander. The thorough and permanent work done by him upon some of our highways is still pointed out, as it will be in years to come, as an example of true economy for the town, and the work thus done by him was illustrative of the real quality of the man. He had a kindly heart and those who knew him best held him in the highest esteem.

His funeral takes place from the house this afternoon at half-past two.

A striking and memorable figure in the local history of Brattleboro passed away in the death on Tuesday morning of Willard Huntington Alexander at his long-time home on Canal street. Mr. Alexander had been a resident of Brattleboro since 1851. For many years previous to that he had lived in Chesterfield, N. H., having grown up in that town from his childhood. His birth, however, took place in Montague, Mass., to which place his father removed after living a few years in Chesterfield, coming originally from Winchester, N. H. Mr. Alexander was born Sept. 14, 1806. He was one of the 11 children of Ebenezer and Rhoda (Scott) Alexander. He left his father's home at the age of 11 years to live with Capt. Oliver Brown of Revolutionary fame. As the boy grew toward manhood he taught school for a number of years, and entered finally into an agreement to care for the old folk, three in number, during their lifetime, for the farm. The signing of a note, however, brought him to financial disaster, and he lost the farm, but subsequently leased it and fulfilled his contract to the satisfaction of the old people and their friends. His marriage to Eunice L. Scott, who survives him, took place March 3, 1829, and it was on the Chesterfield farm that their family of seven children were born and reared. In 1851, as already stated, Mr. Alexander removed to Brattleboro, building the house on Canal street which has ever since been his home. At one time he was the owner of nearly the whole tract now known as "Cemetery hill," and took the first steps toward opening it up as a residence portion of the village. In conversation recently Mr. Alexander stated that when he bought the tract there was only one house standing upon it. He used the land for a market garden, but in due time laid out and opened Prospect and Washington streets, presenting them to the town, getting his return in the land sold for building lots. He has been best known to the present generation as a market-gardener on the well-known tract of land owned by him on the road to the Hunt farm, a mile south of the village. This business he continued with success up to the end of his active life.

Mr. Alexander has been several times honored with public office, serving as town grand juror for four years, and as a member of the board of bailiffs for the same length of time. No man ever had a more active interest in all community affairs than did he. He was a man distinctively of his own ideas on all public questions and expressed himself upon them with entire fearlessness. For a long term of years no village or school meeting was complete without his presence. He invariably occupied a seat well toward the front, where his full head of white hair was a conspicuous object, and where he was ready to join in whatever discussion came up. His speeches were short, but always to the point. Whether one enjoyed them depended upon whether the old man was upon his or upon the opposing side. Oftentimes, in a certain temper of the public mind, he swayed a public meeting almost at will, and many is the man of far greater pretensions as an orator who has felt the sting of his abrupt thrusts of sarcasm. He had a great love for children and the children in their turn looked to him as their friend. There are few Brattleboro readers who will not recall as a familiar sight the old man driving through our streets with his wagon or sleigh filled with merry school children.

To discuss all sides of Mr. Alexander's character would be an impossible task, but it would be easy to fill a long chapter with characteristic anecdotes and illustrations. While it would not be pleasant to recall all of his ways, and manner of speech, to his credit it must be said that he undoubtedly possessed a deep and innate hatred of everything that savored of religious cant, and that this was responsible for no little of the brusqueness which was sometimes offensive. That he possessed genuine kindness of heart his thoughtfulness for the poor, the aged and the stricken, abundantly testifies. He was a regular attendant at the Universalist church, but in his latter days had come to feel, as he expressed himself to his friends, "a firm belief in an unconscious rest" to which he was about to pass. All arrangements for the end of his life had been made, and instructions for his funeral had been given, with as much composure as though he was going upon a journey. Death resulted from the natural decline of old age. He has, however, shown a remarkable vitality, having been often thought to be at the point of death within the past two or three years.

Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Alexander, of whom four now survive—Charles E., of Guilford, Serotia, who has faithfully cared for her parents in their declining years, John F., a well-known manufacturer at Saxtons River, and Frank E., now resident in the South. Henry W., another of their children, is well remembered as a prominent music teacher, as is also Elijah S., a successful Chicago business man, over whose large estate protracted litigation grew. The seventh child died in early life. A sister of Mr. Alexander, Mrs. Scott, is still living in Montague, Mass., at the age of 82.

Mr. Alexander was a life-long Democrat of the most pronounced type. In early life he was a member of the Congregational church, but left that church before his removal to Brattleboro.

The celebration of the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander took place in 1879, and was a happy event which is well remembered by the large company who were present.

The funeral was held at the house yesterday afternoon, attended by the Revs. Phalen and Sprague.

DEATH OF W. H. ALEXANDER.

A striking and memorable figure in the local history of Brattleboro passed away in the death on Tuesday morning of Willard Huntington Alexander at his long-time home on Canal street. Mr. Alexander had been a resident of Brattleboro since 1851. For many years previous to that he had lived in Chesterfield, N. H., having grown up in that town from his childhood. His birth, however, took place in Montague, Mass., to which place his father removed after living a few years in Chesterfield, coming originally from Winchester, N. H. Mr. Alexander was born Sept. 14, 1806. He was one of the 11 children of Ebenezer and Rhoda (Scott) Alexander. He left his father's home at the age of 11 years to live with Capt. Oliver Brown of Revolutionary fame. As the boy grew toward manhood he taught school for a number of years, and entered finally into an agreement to care for the old folk, three in number, during their lifetime, for the farm. The signing of a note, however, brought him to financial disaster, and he lost the farm, but subsequently leased it and fulfilled his contract to the satisfaction of the old people and their friends. His marriage to Eunice L. Scott, who survives him, took place March 3, 1829, and it was on the Chesterfield farm that their family of seven children were born and reared. In 1851, as already stated, Mr. Alexander removed to Brattleboro, building the house on Canal street which has ever since been his home. At one time he was the owner of nearly the whole tract now known as "Cemetery hill," and took the first steps toward opening it up as a residence portion of the village. In conversation recently Mr. Alexander stated that when he bought the tract there was only one house standing upon it. He used the land for a market garden, but in due time laid out and opened Prospect and Washington streets, presenting them to the town, getting his return in the land sold for building lots. He has been best known to the present generation as a market-gardener on the well-known tract of land owned by him on the road to the Hunt farm, a mile south of the village. This business he continued with success up to the end of his active life.

Mr. Alexander has been several times honored with public office, serving as town grand juror for four years, and as a member of the board of bailiffs for the same length of time. No man ever had a more active interest in all community affairs than did he. He was a man distinctively of his own ideas on all public questions and expressed himself upon them with entire fearlessness. For a long term of years no village or school meeting was complete without his presence. He invariably occupied a seat well toward the front, where his full head of white hair was a conspicuous object, and where he was ready to join in whatever discussion came up. His speeches were short, but always to the point. Whether one enjoyed them depended upon whether the old man was upon his or upon the opposing side. Oftentimes, in a certain temper of the public mind, he swayed a public meeting almost at will, and many is the man of far greater pretensions as an orator who has felt the sting of his abrupt thrusts of sarcasm. He had a great love for children and the children in their turn looked to him as their friend. There are few Brattleboro readers who will not recall as a familiar sight the old man driving through our streets with his wagon or sleigh filled with merry school children.

To discuss all sides of Mr. Alexander's character would be an impossible task, but it would be easy to fill a long chapter with characteristic anecdotes and illustrations. While it would not be pleasant to recall all of his ways, and manner of speech, to his credit it must be said that he undoubtedly possessed a deep and innate hatred of everything that savored of religious cant, and that this was responsible for no little of the brusqueness which was sometimes offensive. That he possessed genuine kindness of heart his thoughtfulness for the poor, the aged and the stricken, abundantly testifies. He was a regular attendant at the Universalist church, but in his latter days had come to feel, as he expressed himself to his friends, "a firm belief in an unconscious rest" to which he was about to pass. All arrangements for the end of his life had been made, and instructions for his funeral had been given, with as much composure as though he was going upon a journey. Death resulted from the natural decline of old age. He has, however, shown a remarkable vitality, having been often thought to be at the point of death within the past two or three years.

Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Alexander, of whom four now survive—Charles E., of Guilford, Scotia, who has faithfully cared for her parents in their declining years, John F., a well-known manufacturer at Saxtons River, and Frank E., now resident in the South. Henry W., another of their children, is well remembered as a prominent music teacher, as is also Elijah S., a successful Chicago business man, over whose large estate protracted litigation grew. The seventh child died in early life. A sister of Mr. Alexander, Mrs. Scott, is still living in Montague, Mass., at the age of 82.

Mr. Alexander was a life-long Democrat of the most pronounced type. In early life he was a member of the Congregational church, but left that church before his removal to Brattleboro.

The celebration of the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander took place in 1879, and was a happy event which is well remembered by the large company who were present.

The funeral was held at the house yesterday afternoon, attended by the Revs. Phalen and Sprague.

Mr. Allen was born in Halifax, Oct. 8, 1824. While he was an infant his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan S. When his father died Mr. Allen bought the interests of the other nine children in the old home place and had since carried on the farm. Several small pieces of adjoining land have been added to the original farm, and one entire farm, known as the Potter place, has been added, the Allen farm now comprising 100 acres. Rifle Found Beside Body of Florist; Time of Death Unknown

NEIGHBOR SAW HIM LAST ON THURSDAY Feb 28 — 1957

The body of Ralph George "Laddie" Allen, 70, well-known florist, was found Monday afternoon in his home at 192 Canal Street, where he evidently had taken his own life by shooting.

Police were called at 1:48 p.m. Monday by Lowell Adams, proprietor of the Clark Avenue Grocery, whose home at 204 Canal Street is directly across from Allen's. Adams told police that he had not seen Allen since Thursday of last week and that mail and papers were still in the door.

Officer Edward C. Pickering responded to the call and had to break down a door to enter. He found Allen dead in the kitchen, shot in the head, with a .30-40 rifle, with but one cartridge discharged, beside his body. Chief Richard B. Putnam was called and also Dr. Oscar A. Burton, health officer. The exact time of death was not determined but police believe that it was late Thursday night or early Friday morning. Dr. Burton gave a verdict of death by suicide and gave permission for removal of the body to the Mitchell Funeral Home.

Mr. Allen was born in Brattleboro Dec. 30, 1880, one of four children of the late Charles Edwin and Emma M. (Hodge) Allen. He attended Brattleboro schools and was associated for a number of years with his father in the florist business. In recent years he had operated greenhouses on Clark Avenue.

He leaves one sister, Miss Florence Cragin Allen of Brattleboro. He was a brother of the late Louis I. Allen of Brattleboro, who died in 1947, and the late Carrol Allen, who died in Jackson, Mich., in 1937.

Bearers were Gordon Wilson, Felix Renaud, James Irish and Guy Johnson. Entombment was in Mitchell's vault. Burial will be in the spring at Morningside Cemetery.

VERMONT PERSONALITY

By

EMMA BAILEY

June, to many, rhymes with moon, and spoon, and weddings, but in Brattleboro, June means the Alumni Parade which is synonymous with Henry B. Allen, Class of '84. One hundred and two years of age, he has marched in every alumni parade since it was organized in 1907 under the leadership of E. Burr Smith.

Henry B. Allen is a native Vermonter from native Vermont parents, grandparents, and great-grandparents. He was born on the original Fort Dummer site which was then owned by his great-uncle. Asked about the fort, he said, "I remember holding on to my great-uncle's hand as he showed me the sunken corner post of the old fort."

The first school Mr. Allen attended was known as the primary school on Washington Street. "From there I went to Reed Street and then to high school," he said. "It stood where the new (old to today's students) high school is, but was made of wood and the high school occupied the top floor. The lower two floors were for the intermediate grades."

The question of how they all studied in the one large room brought a hearty chuckle, "Easy enough: some recited while others studied. No different from today's young'uns who do their homework with radio and TV going — or a button receiver in one ear." Henry Allen thought for a moment then continued, "It was good that way. By the time it was our turn to study a subject we had heard it enough to understand what we were doing. Not a bad idea at all."

Henry Allen's class of 1884 was the last to graduate from the wooden high school. "The new high school (now the municipal building) opened that fall," he said.

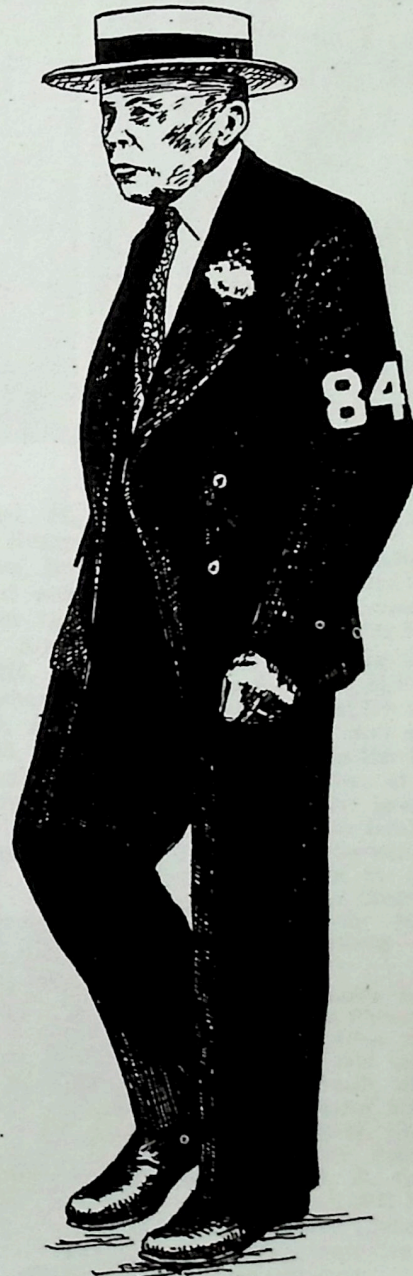

Though the alumni parade concludes the week of baccalaureate, class picnics, awards, speeches, and commencement, the plans are made during the winter. Class members gather to discuss ideas for floats, hoping to win the coveted award. Weeks are spent in feverish preparation, keeping their theme a secret. Husbands will not reveal their class project to their wives, and vice versa.

Dawns the perfect day in June when the alumni ride their creative and original vehicles. Others walk holding aloft witty or provocative slogans. Those who no longer build floats or carry placards from lack of active members or the infirmities of age, ride in open cars. But — not Henry B. Allen — never! He always walks, bless'im!

One year a thoughtful group of citizens offered a horse and buggy for Henry Allen. Oh no; he waved it away and stood marking time behind the parade marshal.

Flags wave, drums roll, then echo up and down the Connecticut valley as a hush descends upon the crowded sidewalks. The silence is eloquent with admiration and humble respect as Henry B. Allen leads the alumni of Brattleboro High School in their annual parade. A meticulously-pressed suit, shoes reflecting the bright June sunlight, a rose in his lapel, a jaunty straw hat and his arm band with '84 on it — this at one-hundred-and-two!

Last year the class of 1951 built a gold throne for the living embodiment of the Brattleboro Alumni Parade, and it traveled the parade route empty. Why? Because Henry B. Allen preferred to walk every step of the way — and he always will.

Town's Oldest Resident, Henry Allen, Dies at 104

Henry B. Allen, Brattleboro's oldest resident, died this morning in Thompson House. He had observed his 104th birthday on Oct. 18.

The oldest living alumnus of Brattleboro High School, he had perennially led the parade on foot wearing a straw hat, double-breasted blue suit, carnation and the numerals '1884' on an armband. In 1967, at the age of 102, he received an ovation from spectators as he walked the entire route carrying an umbrella for protection against the unprecedented rainy parade weather.

In June of this year, Mr. Allen made an appearance, but rode the distance.

He was a financial supporter of the Alumni Association, making gifts to the Benjamin Bingham Scholarship Fund. On the occasion of his 103rd birthday he was honored by the association and presented a silver tray.

Mr. Allen on his 96th birthday made actuarial history by outliving the American Experience Mortality tables and collecting his own life insurance on a policy written in 1894 by the New York Life Insurance Co.

He had entered Thompson House in November 1965 but had walked back to his Oak Street residence, weather notwithstanding, almost daily until about a year ago.

HENRY ALLEN

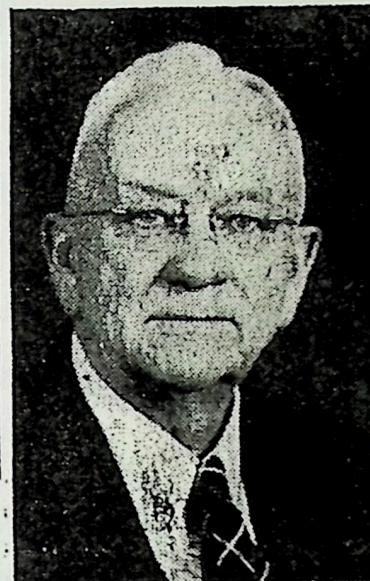

Born in Brattleboro Oct. 18, 1864, he was the son of Henry J. and Emily (Boice) Allen. He attended schools here and was for 15 years engaged in the livery stable business. After selling the business in 1919, he operated a storage warehouse on Oak Street. His wife, Biddella, died in August 1946. His only survivor is a daughter, Mrs. Marion E. Strowbridge of Oak Street.

Private graveside services have been planned.

Charles E. Allen Dies in Home After Long Illness

Interesting Story of How He Happened to Embark on Gardening Business
—Funeral Today

Charles Edwin Allen, 73, who for 53 years was a well-known florist in this town, died at 1.30 Wednesday morning in his home on Canal street. Mr. Allen had been in failing health the past four years, but during that time had been dressed and about his home a greater part of the time. Death resulted from heart trouble and kidney complications.

Mr. Allen was born in Westminster Feb. 2, 1851, a son of George Green Allen and Almira (Carpenter) Allen. He moved to Brattleboro when a small boy, with his parents, and attended the Brattleboro schools, including the high school. He married Emma Maria Hodge of Groton, Mass., Feb. 16, 1875. Mrs. Allen died March 5 of this year. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Allen, all of whom survive. Florence Cragin Allen, head of the Latin department of the Greenfield (Mass.) high school; Carroll Everett Allen, who is proprietor of the Allen House in West Lebanon, N. H.; Ralph George Allen, who lived at home; and Louis Isaiah Allen, owner of the railroad news stand and proprietor of the Bridge street garage. Mr. Allen also leaves one sister, Mrs. Candace Crown of Brattleboro, who lives at the Home for the Aged.

The story of how Mr. Allen happened to take up gardening was told in The Vermont Phoenix of Aug. 25, 1871, when Mr. Allen decided to devote himself more largely to the cultivation of flowers. It said that in the month of February, 1868, Mr. Allen, then a Brattleboro boy of 17, read an article in The Phoenix which aroused his ideas. The article was about two clerks who, on the failure of their employers, were offered as payment for their services the choice between $100 in money and a piece of land of the same value, that being the amount of the merchant's indebtedness to each. The elder clerk, who had first choice, took the money, but never rose above a clerkship. The boy who took the land earned a comfortable income and in a few years achieved a permanent success in business.

This story awoke in the mind of young Allen a desire to try his hand at market gardening, and after obtaining permission of his father he set out a patch of strawberry plants from which he realized the next year the sum of $70. Thus stimulated, he took up the cultivation of other crops and during the third season after he began gardening in the small way mentioned he sold 8,000 sweet potato plants, 4,000 tomato plants, 12,000 cabbage more than 20,000 strawberry plants, while from his own strawberry bed he marketed 1,200 quarts of berries. That same season he made 2,000 bottles of ketchup from the fruit of his own tomato plants and raised 18,000 sage plants besides a fine assortment of flowers.

He built his first propagating house for the culture of shrubs and flowering plants in 1870, doing all the work himself. It was 50 by 25 feet in dimensions. In the period from 1875 to 1880 he increased his greenhouses to about 12,000 feet of glass. At this time he cultivated strawberries extensively and did a large catalog trade, later supplying wholesale and retail trade in cut flowers and plants. Since 1906 until his health failed, he had been a successful contractor and builder and manufacturer of cement blocks. In February, 1921, Mr. Allen sold out his florist business to Carroll N. Bond, together with the home place on Canal street, and he moved to the cement house which he built and owned and which adjoined the former Allen homestead.

Mr. Allen was a member of the Centre Congregational parish.

The funeral will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at his late home on Canal street. Rev. E. P. Wood of All Souls church will officiate. The burial will take place in the Allen family lot in Morningside cemetery.

Mr. Allen was a home loving man of high ideals and enjoyed the respect and confidence of all his associates. His dealings with others throughout his long period of business activity were marked by principles of honor and integrity.

March 9, 1924 DEATH OF MRS. C. E. ALLEN.

Wife of Former Widely-Known Florist Sustained Shock Last Week—Funeral Today at 2.30 p. m.

Mrs. Emma Maria (Hodge) Allen, 74, wife of Charles E. Allen, formerly for many years a widely known florist, died at 11.30 a. m. Wednesday in her home at 204 Canal street. She had not been well since about four years ago this spring, when she had a severe illness, but was able to be about her home until seven weeks ago Tuesday. She was then confined to her bed three or four weeks, but recovered sufficiently so that she was able to be down stairs up to a week ago, when she sustained a shock which resulted in her death.

She was a native of Groton, Mass., and was born Sept. 7, 1849, one of the three children of Roswell B. Hodge and Esther Maria (Cragin) Hodge. When she was young her mother died, and she came to live in the home of her aunt, the late Mrs. E. B. Campbell. After leaving school she taught in the school in Guilford near Christ Episcopal church. She married Charles Edwin Allen of Brattleboro Feb. 16, 1875, and their home was at 194 Canal street until a few years ago, when Mr. Allen sold his florist business to Carroll N. Bond, Mr. Bond's father, George N. Bond, buying the Allen residence.

Mrs. Allen was a great lover of her home and gave to it the best that was in her and as a neighbor and friend she won a very large place for herself. She ever was thoughtful of others and this thoughtfulness was manifest in the cheer carried into the homes of many by the blossoms which she gathered from her own old-fashioned garden of rare and choice specimens of flowers, of which she was especially fond. She was a member of no organization, but formerly was a member of the visiting committee at the Home for the Aged.

Besides her husband she leaves a daughter and three sons. They are: Miss Florence C. Allen, teacher of Latin in the high school in Greenfield, Mass.; Carroll E. Allen, proprietor of the Allen House in West Lebanon, N. H.; Ralph G. Allen, who lives at home, and Louis I. Allen, proprietor of Allen's transfer and auto livery business.

Jason Cady Allen.

Jason C. Allen, 81, one of Vernon's foremost citizens, died Saturday morning after being in ill health about a year. He was born in Wallingford (Vt.) Feb. 26, 1835, a son of Robert Allen and Eliza Paine Doolittle. He married Mary Sophia Combs Dec. 1, 1864. She died Jan. 12, 1896.

Mr. Allen had lived on the Allen homestead since 1856. He followed in the footsteps of his worthy ancestors, who were noted for their courage and faithfulness in the performance of duty. The Allen Memorial, Series I, compiled by a brother, O. P. Allen of Palmer, Mass., notes his relationship to Gov. John Carver, General Ethan Allen, and many others of Colonial and Revolutionary fame. With such noble lineage, one does not wonder that he was fearless and undaunted in promoting the cause of right. The town of Vernon recognized his sterling qualities and honored him with offices, namely, lister, overseer of poor, justice of peace, and for years he was chairman of the selectmen. In 1896 he was elected to the Vermont legislature, receiving every vote but two.

From boyhood Mr. Allen was identified with the Advent Christian church in Vernon. He was a faithful steward and a staunch supporter of its interests. While health permitted, he was a constant attendant. He was a thorough Christian. He actively engaged in the cause of temperance. His genial ways and sunny disposition won him a host of friends who will sadly miss him.

Rev. F. H. Leavitt officiated at the funeral and spoke of him in highest terms of praise, exhorting others to live as he had. Mrs. C. T. Holton and Miss Gertrude Holton sang "Some Day as a Duet." E. W. Dunklee rendered a solo. "Nearq, My God, to Thee," was sung at the close by Miss Holton. Beautiful flowers were a tribute of the esteem of the people. He will be greatly missed in the home, the church and the community. Mr. Allen leaves one son, Robert Cady Allen, a grandson, Robert Jason Allen, and a granddaughter, Amy G. Easton Allen, two brothers, Orrin P. Allen of Palmer, Mass., who is an author of histories and genealogies, and Robert Clark Allen of Springfield, this state. Much sympathy is extended to his only son.

Relatives from out of town who attended the funeral were R. Clark Allen of Springfield (Vt.), Mrs. O. P. Allen and Miss Julia Allen of Palmer, Miss Lillian Allen of Deerfield, Mass., Mrs. Tina Carrol and Mrs. Jennie Potter of Rowe, Mass., and Wallace Stoddard of Adams, Mass.

WEST BRATTLEBORO.
Feb 29 Death of Ezra Ames. 1908

Ezra Ames, 79, died Saturday night in the home on Ames hill where he had lived the past 54 years. Mr. Ames was taken ill about eight weeks ago with heart disease and for seven weeks had been confined to the bed. He was known to be in a critical condition. Until taken with his last illness he had been in apparent good health for a man of his age and was able to do more than most men at his time of life. Ames hill, on which he had spent the greater part of his life, was named after his relatives of an older generation.

Mr. Ames was born in Putney, July 15, 1828, and was the son of Ezra and Sibyl (Harris) Ames. His father died when he was a child and his only sister died at the age of seven. After his father's death he and his mother came to West Brattleboro to live with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Harris. Mr. Ames attended the district schools and the academy, of which his uncle, Roswell Harris, was then preceptor. After graduation from the academy he taught school a few years in Marlboro and Dummerston and then engaged in carpentering several years before buying the farm on Ames hill. His wife, who was Hannah Mather, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Mather of Marlboro, died in November, 1905.

Mr. Ames was one of the best known farmers in town and had carried on the large farm successfully many years, turning the active management over to his son, William H. Ames, in great measure in late years. He was a hard worker, conscientious and of unquestioned integrity. Although he had never held any town office, he had served the school district No. 9, in the old district school days, in various official capacities. He had never allied himself with any church or organization but had attended the Marlboro Congregational church. He is the last survivor of his father's family and the only other near relatives besides the son are his daughter, Mrs. Joseph Johnson, and four grandchildren.

The funeral was held in the home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. H. H. Shaw, pastor of the Marlboro Congregational church, officiated and the body was taken to Marlboro for burial.

July 24 James W. Austin. 1904

James W. Austin, 34, for the past few years clerk at the Brattleboro House, died about 9 o'clock Friday night at the Farren hospital in Montague, Mass. He was stricken with paralysis on Wednesday, July 13, after an illness of several days, and on Sunday he was taken to the hospital. He became unconscious Tuesday morning and did not regain consciousness. Mr. Austin was born in Brattleboro January 2, 1870, and was a son of John and Margaret (Bowler) Austin. He graduated from the Brattleboro high school in 1888, and for a time after that he was a clerk in the Pullen grocery store. Then he was employed in the Carpenter organ factory, where he remained until he went to the hotel. He was the last survivor of the Austin family, his nearest relatives being two nephews and a niece, Edward, Patrick and Katherine Baker of Somerville, Mass., two uncles, Martin and James Austin of Brattleboro, and an aunt, Mrs. Honora Long of Joplin, Mo.

The body was taken to his late home at 16 Canal street Saturday, and on Monday morning at 9 o'clock the funeral was held in St. Michael's Roman Catholic church, Rev. Patrick Cunningham officiating. The burial was in the Roman Catholic cemetery, the bearers being John J. Austin, Thomas A. Austin, Martin Austin, Jr., John J. Grady, J. T. Denning and G. H. Danyew. A delegation from the Vermont Wheel club attended the funeral. There were many floral remembrances.

Among those who attended the funeral from out of town were P. M. Baker and sons, Edward and Patrick, of Somerville, and Harry Flood, Charles Houston and Joseph Donoghue of Holyoke, former clerks at the Brattleboro House.

To people who knew the Austin family not more than 18 years ago, when father, mother, three daughters and son were living, the death of James, the last of all, comes with peculiar sadness. The family was one which maintained in an exceptional degree the cordial and intimate relations which are a fine part of life, and in addition the home was a place of hospitality and good cheer for all who visited it. James Austin was cheery, warm hearted and generous and these qualities and his readiness and originality in repartee made him a welcome and cheerful visitor in any circle in which he joined. Those who knew him well will always have a kindly and pleasant memory of him.

Marguerite Allis, Novelist, Dies at 71; Depicted Early Life in New England

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 7—Miss Marguerite Allis, a historical novelist, died here yesterday. She was 71 years old.

Miss Allis contended that history concerned people rather than dates and places, and this was reflected in her writing, much of which concerned her native New England. The state of Vermont honored her for her book "Not Without Peril."

Among her novels were "The Right Storm," "Grave Pursuit," "Now We Are Free," "The Bridge," "Law of the Land," "Water Over the Dam," "Free Soil," "Charity Straw" and "All in Good Time." In 1938 she wrote the Connecticut Trilogy for the state's tercentenary.

A frequent contributor of articles on early New England music to Etude and other music publications, Miss Allis illustrated many of her own books. She studied at the American Conservatory in Fontainebleau, France, and later wrote a history of the school.

Wrote on Kansas Slavery

"Free Soil," published by G. P. Putnam's Sons early this year, was a fictionalized story of the struggle over slavery in Kansas before it became a state. "Not Without Peril," published by the same house in 1941, was based on the life of Jemima Sartwell, one of the first settlers of Vermont.

1942
Miss Marguerite Allis

Other Marguerite Allis books were "Connecticut River" (1939), an illustrated history of the Connecticut River Valley, and "The Splendour Stays" (1942), which, with "Water Over the Dam" (1947) and "All in Good Time" (1944) depicted life in early-day Connecticut.

HON. CHARLES J. AMIDON.

Sudden Death Tuesday Night of Hinsdale's Leading Citizen.

Aug 21, 1900

His Long and Successful Business Career, the Important Offices Which He Had Held, and the Important Movements in Which He Had Been a Factor.

No calamity has caused for many years such deep and heartfelt grief and sorrow in Hinsdale as the sudden death of Hon. Charles J. Amidon which took place about 8.30 Tuesday evening. Mr. Amidon had not been quite in his usual health for two or three days and Saturday night suffered from an attack of acute indigestion, from which he rallied and was thought to be much better. He sat out on his veranda early Tuesday evening and chatted with people passing. Later he thought to take a bath before retiring, and it was while in the bath that the sudden change came over him and he was soon past all human aid. His death was undoubtedly caused by some obscure heart lesion.

Charles Jacob Amidon was born in Chesterfield, April 23, 1827, a son of Otis and Nancy (Cook) Amidon. The Amidons traced their descent from Roger Amidon, the Huguenot, who, escaping from the siege of Rochelle, France, went to England and subsequently coming to America settled in Salem, Mass., in 1636, and was one of the original proprietors of Rehoboth, Mass.

Roger Amidon's great grandson, Jacob, a student in Harvard college when the Revolutionary war began, joined the army in time to fight at Bunker Hill, was captured by the British and confined afterward on a prison ship in New York harbor. He settled in Chesterfield in 1782 and died there in 1880, aged 86 years. His son, Otis Amidon, merchant and farmer, was an influential man of Chesterfield, represented the town repeatedly in the legislature, and was honored with many local offices.

His son, Charles Jacob, the subject of this sketch, received his education in the common schools of the town and at the old Chesterfield academy, in that day considered one of the best academic schools in the state. In early manhood he was a successful school teacher, but in 1849 formed a partnership with the late Henry O. Coolidge, afterward of Keene, the firm going into business as merchants at Chesterfield Centre. In 1851 Mr. Amidon moved to Hinsdale and went into business as a merchant with the late George W. Holland, likewise a native of Chesterfield, and continued in mercantile pursuits until 1862, when he entered the firm of Bishop & Boyden, woolen manufacturers, the firm name being "Bishop, Boyden & Amidon." As the years went by death claimed the two elder partners, but Mr. Amidon continued the business up to the time of his death, associating with him as partners his two sons, Philip F. and William O., under the firm name of "C. J. Amidon & Sons," who also operate a woolen mill at Wilton, where the elder son resides. The product of these mills has always been of excellent quality and found a ready market, and the firm has been very prosperous financially even during the hard times.

Mr. Amidon married May 11, 1852, Mary J. Harvey of Chesterfield, and there have been four children, Philip Frank, Mary Elizabeth, Esther Maria, and William Otis Amidon, of whom the wife and sons only are living. Of the daughters, the youngest, Esther, died in early childhood; while the elder daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Amidon Whitredge, a woman of unusual beauty and varied accomplishments, was a victim of consumption in later years, and this was one of the greatest griefs of the father's life.

Politically Mr. Amidon was first a Whig, but early joined the Republican party and soon became influential, not only in local but in state politics. He was postmaster at Chesterfield in 1849-50; postmaster of Hinsdale from 1861 to 1872; state bank commissioner from 1855 to 1857; representative to the state legislature in 1861-64, 1876, and '77, and in 1883; state senator in 1878, 1879 and 1880, besides being president of the Hinsdale savings bank, associated with banks at Brattleboro and Keene as director, and holding at different times all the various town offices. There is no doubt that more than once the highest office in the gift of the state was at his disposal if he would have consented to accept the honor and responsibility.

In 1839 Mr. Amidon was appointed one of a committee of five to draft plans and make estimates and suggestions for the new state library at Concord. This edifice was dedicated in 1895, the plans of the committee, in formulating which he took an active part, being accepted by the legislature without alteration. Though not seeking political honors for himself, Mr. Amidon was a powerful aid and ally in aiding others to attain offices of preferment. He it was who more than 42 years ago first presented the name of William Haile for governor of New Hampshire, and it was largely through the former's efforts that Mr. Haile was elected. He likewise had no small share in bringing forward later the name of the late United States senator, J. W. Patterson, then a Dartmouth professor, as member of Congress, and in securing his election. But in all his political work he sought no ignoble or servile methods, but as has been well said of him, "good judgment directed by an honest purpose gave him power that commanded universal respect and esteem. In every public position he has filled he has been foremost in influence, and his good common sense has attracted attention."

Widely known as was Mr. Amidon throughout the county and the state, it is here at home among his own townsmen that he will be most missed. Easily the most influential citizen, his sole end and aim was for the best interests of the town along the lines of general improvement and a higher education. He was a charter member of Golden Rule lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, and in his life he personified the precepts of the Golden Rule. He gave largely in charity, but so unostentatiously that his gifts were seldom known. He aided largely in advancing the public schools and establishing a town library. It was in a great degree due to him that the town possessed for 20 years one of the finest town halls in the state, and he contributed largely of his private means that nothing might be lacking in its completeness; and since its destruction by fire, though not one of the building committee, he has taken deep interest in rebuilding the town hall and made many valuable suggestions.

In his religious views Mr. Amidon was very liberal, but accorded to every man the privilege of thinking as he pleased. For himself he demonstrated by his life-work that he believed in living wisely and well and it was his chief desire to be numbered as "one who loved his fellow men." The sharp sense of personal bereavement will pass away, the ranks will close up and new men will take the place of those now rapidly passing away, but it will be long before Hinsdale will again be called to mourn the death of so good, generous and noble a man and public-spirited a citizen.

The body of Mr. Amidon will lie in state in the front hall of the Amidon residence on Main street from 11:30 to 12:30, today, Friday, so that all who desire may view the remains. The funeral services will take place at 1 P. M., Rev. M. H. Harris of Worcester conducting the religious services. E. H. Miller of Brattleboro will sing. The funeral is not private, but all who desire will have an opportunity to attend the services. The post-office will be closed by order of the government during the services. The burial will be in the family lot in Pine Grove cemetery.

 DIES IN FLORIDA

 Spend Winter; Health
 Declining

Dec 15, 1947

LEADING SURGEON OF NORTHERN N. E.

Dr. George R. Anderson, 67, one of the leading physicians and surgeons in northern New England, in practice in Brattleboro since 1901, and member of the foremost medical and surgical associations in this country, died shortly after 7 o'clock Saturday morning at Winter Haven, Fla.

Dr. Anderson, accompanied by Miss Ruth Burlin, R. N., had left here Dec. 7 to spend the winter in Florida, as he had the past few seasons. His health had been falling for the last few years and he had not been active in his profession since 1939.

The body was sent to Plattsburg, N. Y., for services at an undetermined time.

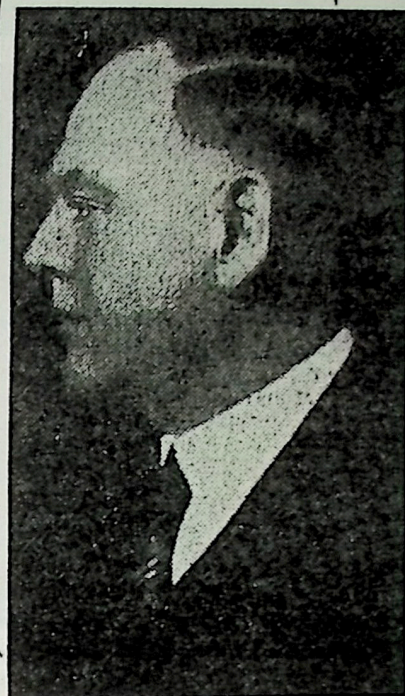

Medical Graduate of U.V.M.

Dr. Anderson was born in Plattsburg, N. Y., Sept. 14, 1875, a son of Moses P. Anderson, an iron manufacturer, and Emma J. (Riley) Anderson. His father, a native of Norway, was at one time associated with the Howe Scale Co. of Rutland, in which city the family lived for some time.

After attending school in Plattsburg and the Rutland English Classical Institute, Dr. Anderson took the full medical course at the University of Vermont, graduating in 1898. For the next 18 months he was an intern at the Mary Fletcher hospital in Burlington, after which he took a course in operative surgery at the New York Post-Graduate college and studied surgery at the famous Mayo Clinics at Rochester, Minn., and at other hospitals. He made a number of foreign trips with friends, during the most active period of his practice, for recreation and for observation in some of the world's best hospitals.

Not only did Dr. Anderson possess rare skill in his operative work but he was an able diagnostician, and he made a deep and favorable impression upon both the professional and lay mind. He inspired his patients with a confidence that was exceptional. He was endowed with a genial personality that made friends everywhere, and his generosity toward patients in unfavorable financial circumstances and his good comradeship among his associates were among his outstanding traits. Commissioned in Medical Corps.

Retired Surgeon Dies

DR. GEORGE R. ANDERSON.

When the Spanish-American war was declared Dr. Anderson entered the service and was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps, attached to the First Vermont Infantry. He became captain and assistant surgeon and in January, 1909, served a half year after he had become a practitioner in Brattleboro, he was appointed major and surgeon in place of Maj. George C. Berkeley of St. Albans, resigned. He was in the regiment 15 years.

In July, 1901, he opened an office in Hotel Brooks, Brattleboro. Before that, following his hospital service, he practiced a year in Pittsford as assistant to Dr. H. H. Swift. After 10 years here, in 1911 he began limiting his medical practice and devoting his attention to surgery. His skill had become widely known by this time, and as his fame spread the demand upon his time became constant and he was called with increasing frequency to operate, not only in the Brattleboro Memorial hospital but in hospitals in Bellows Falls, Springfield, Vt., St. Albans and elsewhere.

Fellow of A.C.S.

On Oct. 22, 1915, Dr. Anderson received notice of his election as a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons. He was the second Vermont surgeon to be admitted to this organization. The following month he was elected surgeon of the Vermont commandery, Military Order of Foreign Wars.

In April of that year he performed at the Memorial hospital one of the first operations of its kind, if not the first, ever performed in the state, when he used an especially invented machine for bone grafting in an operation for Pott's disease of the spine, removing a piece of a patient's spinal column and replacing it with a section of bone cut from the lower leg. In June, 1917, he was named by the war department as a member of the board of exemptions for Windham county, under the provisions of the selective draft army bill.

In August, 1920, he added to his office complete equipment for bacteriological and pathological work, placing in charge Miss Ruth Burlin, former assistant superintendent at the Brattleboro Memorial hospital and assistant in the laboratory of Tufts Medical college in Boston. On Jan. 3, 1933, Dr. Phillip H. Wheeler became associated with Dr. Anderson, sharing the latter's offices in the Peoples bank building.

President of State Society.

Dr. Anderson had been president of the Windham County Medical society, and in October, 1929, was elected president of the Vermont State Medical society. In 1927 the University of Vermont conferred upon him the honorary degree of Master of Science.

He was a Fellow of the American Medical association; member of the Connecticut Valley Medical society, the New England Surgical society, the Association of Military Surgeons and the Association of Rutland Surgeons, and was surgeon on the staff of the Brattleboro Retreat as well as the Memorial hospital and other institutions. He had attended various meetings of the Clinical Congress of Surgeons of North America, in Chicago, Boston and elsewhere, and clinics of the Mayo brothers in Rochester, Minn.

Fraternally he was a member of Brattleboro lodge of Masons, Fort Dummer chapter of Royal Arch Masons and Beauseant commandery of Knights Templar. He also was a member of the Brattleboro Country club. He never married.

The home of Dr. Anderson on Putney road, known as Inwood, is a handsome colonial residence built by David E. McElhinney, formerly of New York and Ames hill, on land formerly a part of the Goodall place. Mr. McElhinney bought the farm in 1912, and erected a residence on an elevated and slightly location overlooking the Connecticut river, fashioning it largely after Washington's home at Mount Vernon.

Memorial services were held at 4.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in St. Michael's Episcopal church. Rev. C. C. Silvester, rector, officiated.

The services, held approximately the same time as the funeral services were held in Morrisonville, N. Y., were largely attended by his many friends and members of the medical profession and nursing profession, who attended in a body, and representatives of Beauseant Commandry Knights Templar, and other Masonic bodies with which he was affiliated. Miss Jessie L. Hawley, organist, played an entire program of request music, favorite selections of Dr. Anderson's.

The services were opened with a tribute to Dr. Anderson by Rev. Mr. Silvester, who also read passages from the Scripture and offered prayer. The benediction closed the service. Following is the tribute:

MILDRED AGNES AMIDON.

Former Brattleboro Girl Dies of Rheumatic Fever and Heart Trouble in Hospital in Boston. JAN 14, 1921

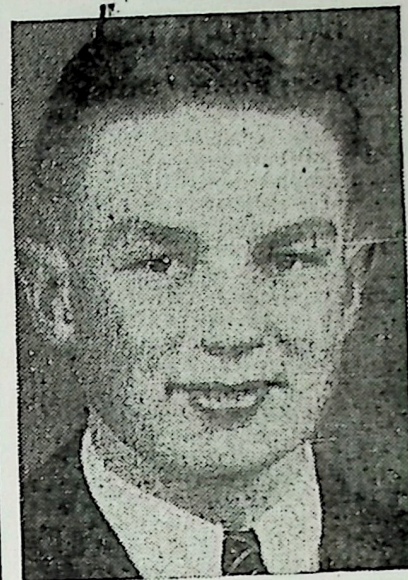

Miss Mildred Agnes Amidon, 20, formerly of Brattleboro, died at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Massachusetts General hospital in Boston, after an illness of six months with rheumatic fever and endocarditis.

She was born in Chesterfield, N. H., Sept. 22, 1900, a daughter of James W. and Emeline (McClenning) Amidon. Her mother died when she was but two years old. Her father remarried, but lived only until she was 12 years old. She then went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones of West Townshend, where she was cared for as one of their own.

She attended high school in Brattleboro and South Lancaster, Mass. She was obliged to give up school, however, on account of ill health and spent several months at the Adams Nursing in Jamaica Plain, Mass. It was thought by the staff at that hospital that light work with plenty of out door exercise might result in her fully regaining her health. She secured a position as nursery governess in a physician's family, where she was happy in her work and was loved deeply by the family and children. It was while with them at Cotuit, on Cape Cod, that she was taken ill. She was taken to the hospital July 6 and had been a great sufferer since. All was done that medical skill could do, but little hope for her recovery was held out, and on Nov. 29 she was placed on the dangerous list. From that time her sister, Leila, and Mrs. Jones, were at her bedside every day. She was a member of the Baptist church in South Windham.

She leaves two sisters, Mrs. Luella Amidon and Miss Leila Amidon, both of Brattleboro, and her step-mother, Mrs. Ina Amidon, also of Brattleboro.

The funeral was held Wednesday in Bond & Son's undertaking parlors. Rev. Clark T. Brownell, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated. Mrs. W. H. Bond sang Sometime We'll Understand and My Jesus, As Thou Wilt. The body was taken to West Chesterfield for burial in the family lot beside the bodies of her father and mother. Those who came to attend the funeral were Mrs. R. L. Crafts of Springfield, Mass., Perley Jones of East Jamaica, Robert Jones of Worcester, Mass., and Mrs. K. B. Jones of Boston.

COMING HOME—The body of Pfc. Bruce R. Amidon, killed on Luzon Island, Philippines, Jan. 22, 1945, is en route home for burial, according to news received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Amidon of West Chesterfield, N. H. The young soldier, a graduate of B.H.S., in '42 served in the Philippines with the 43d Division. Announcement of plans for a military funeral will be made when the date of the arrival of the body is ascertained. JUNE 24, 1949

"We are met together this afternoon to honour the memory of George Riley Anderson, doctor of medicine, doctor of science, widely known and widely loved, both in Brattleboro, Vt., and all New England; skillful, kindly, sympathetic; a man who endeared himself to his fellow townsmen, and to a wider circle as well. Though he be absent in the flesh, yet will he ever be present in the hearts and minds of those who knew him.

"Therefore, we pause for a few minutes in our busy lives, in busy times, in a warring world of many conflicts, to think of him, and to cherish his memory.

"May his soul rest in peace, and light perpetual shine upon him."

PERISHED IN FLAMES.

The Awful Fate of Leroy H. Amidon,

AN 29 1897

In the Fire Which Destroyed the Knapp House at West Brattleboro Monday Morning---Went Back to His Room to Save His Effects---Other Occupants Had Narrow Escapes---Property Loss of $6000.

The second disastrous fire within a few months visited West Brattleboro early Monday morning, and resulted in the destruction of property valued at $6000, and the burning to death of Leroy H. Amidon, a bright, promising youth of 17. Soon after 1:30 o'clock Mrs. Daniel Harris, who lives in John Sargent's house, was awakened by a flash of light upon her chamber window, and looking out across the ruins of last summer's fire, saw flames issuing from the carriage shed of the L. H. Knapp building. She spoke to her husband who aroused the other people in the house and gave the alarm upon the street. Mr. Harris then started to notify the inmates of the burning building, who were: L. H. Knapp and daughter, Leroy Amidon and Arthur Bailey. Mrs. Knapp was visiting in Hinsdale, N. H. Amidon and Bailey boarded and roomed at Mr. Knapp's, the former being a student at Brattleboro academy and the latter the village blacksmith.

The house was a two and one-half story frame building, to which was attached an L which connected the main building with the barn. The front part of the L adjoining the barn was open and was used as a carriage house by Mr. Knapp. In the basement of the main building was the meat market of Horace Prefontaine and directly over this was the drug store of Dr. W. D. Otterson. The building also contained three tenements, two of which were unoccupied. A flight of stairs ran on the outside of the building from the carriage shed to the second floor, and it was near these stairs that the fire started.

At nearly the same time that Mrs. Harris saw the flames Mr. Bailey, who occupied a room on the second floor of the L, was awakened by the crackling of the timbers. Smoke was already pouring into his room and he quickly shouted to Mr. Knapp, whose family occupied rooms in the main building, and also spoke to young Amidon, whose room was on the third floor. By this time the Congregational church bell began to ring, arousing all the people in the village. The Western hand engine company came out in a very few minutes and, with the engine on the common, began playing a stream of water upon the Baptist parsonage, which stood but a few feet from the burning building, as it was seen that it would be useless to try to save the Knapp building. A message asking for assistance was telephoned to Chief Engineer Turner of this village, who rang in the West Brattleboro alarm (five strokes three times) and started steamer No. 4 and hose cart No. 3 to the scene.

The occupants of the building were able to partially dress and escape. Amidon carried out part of his clothes and then re-entered the building for the remainder. He was met on the stairs by Bailey, who told him that the flames had progressed so far that it would be dangerous to remain longer in the building. Amidon, as a young man endeavoring to work his way through school, realized the value of his property and pushed on to the third floor. He was seen to throw out some clothing from the window, and to go back into the room. Several inquiries were made as the fire progressed and excitement ran high as he did not appear and the spectators began to realize that he had perished.

Scarcely any property was saved, as the flames spread rapidly both ways. The steamer arrived in due time but it was not used as the fire was fast dying down, but instead the firemen took hold of the hand engine with the West Brattleboro firemen and assisted in saving the parsonage. One side of the parsonage was scorched, but the wind was blowing directly away from the building, otherwise it would have been burned.

At 4 o'clock the fire was extinguished, but a search for the body of young Amidon could not be made until daylight. The body was found in the northeast corner of the L near the shed and lay partially over a well, which was nearly uncovered. Only the trunk was found and that was charred beyond recognition. The head, arms and legs were entirely destroyed. The body was taken to the Baptist church, where a coroner's inquest was held by Dr. A. I. Miller and Selectmen Webster and Weatherhead. Amidon was the youngest of five children of Mrs. John Jillson of West Dummerston, and was brother of Ray Amidon, clerk in E. D. Whitney's grocery store, formerly with Scott & Jones; of Otis Amidon, formerly employed by A. G. Barnes; of Merton Amidon, and of Miss Alzina Amidon of East Dummerston. He was an honest, hard working boy and was much liked in West Brattleboro. He was president of the Christian Endeavor society of the Baptist church. The funeral was held at the home of his aunt, Mrs. D. A. Burnham at 29 South Main street at 1 o'clock Wednesday, Rev. F. S. Smith of West Brattleboro officiating. The burial was in West Chesterfield, which was Amidon's native town.

The burned building was sold by Mr. Knapp last July to Welcome A. Ramsdell and was insured for $2500 with Sherman & Jenne. In the carriage house was 7000 feet of finished lumber and from 3000 to 4000 feet of clapboards owned by Mr. Knapp, who was engaged in the lumber business in connection with his harness making. This was burned together with the harness which had not been taken to the building into which Mr. Knapp was moving, and also several sleighs, wagons and other vehicles, his household furniture and one horse. There was an insurance of $150 on the carriages and stable property with Sherman & Jenne, $800 on the harness and stock in trade, $200 on tools and machinery, and $500 on household furniture with A. W. Childs & Co. The total value of Knapp's property was about $2500. Prefontaine's loss was $400, covered by insurance with A. W. Childs & Co. He had on hand a good supply of beef and pork and had recently put in a new refrigerator at a cost of $100.

Mr. Bailey's loss was $460, with no insurance. His young driving horse and Mr. Knapp's horse were burned. Mr. Bailey also lost his sleigh, buggy, harness, robes, clothing, a rifle, a fur coat which cost $40, and $8 in money. Dr. Otterson had moved the larger part of his stock to the hotel at the terminus of the electric road, where he lived, but had left in the building a quantity of drugs and fixtures, a trunk of clothing and a gold watch belonging to Mrs. Otterson. His loss was $300, on which there was no insurance. The parsonage was damaged to the amount of $75 and there was a small loss to Rev. F. S. Smith's furniture, all of which was insured with Sherman & Jenne. The origin of the fire is not definitely known, although it is generally believed to have been incendiary. It is difficult to see how it could have been otherwise, as there was no stove, chimney, hot ashes or anything that might cause spontaneous combustion near where the fire started. It is probable that an investigation may be made, in which case interesting facts are likely to be brought out.

WEST BRATTLEBORO.

Leroy H. Amidon.

The people of our village were greatly shocked and plunged into unexpected grief, when it was ascertained that in the fire of Monday morning, Leroy Amidon, a student in the academy, perished in the flames. The young man came to our village to attend school in the fall of 1895. During the first year, he roomed and boarded with Mrs. C. R. Evans. He at once gave promise of a career of usefulness. He had started out to secure an education. He longed to have one. He was succeeding remarkably in acquiring it. He ranked well in his classes as a student, and was enjoying, at the same time, the highest respect and confidence of the community. He was but 17 years of age, but met his expenses by the labor of his own hands, as he was not ashamed to work. His face was always radiant with joy as he succeeded in what he undertook. In May last, he united with the Baptist church, and became at once an active and useful member. He was president of the Endeavor society at the time of his death. The entire community mourn his loss, because he was known of every one, and what was known of him was good. Indeed, it is sad to know that one so full of energy, purpose and promise should so suddenly be cut off from the earth. He leaves a mother, a sister, and three brothers--each of whom may be assured of the profound sympathy of scores of our people.

Fire Notes.

Hot coffee was freely distributed and was greatly appreciated.

Horace Prefontaine was on hand at about the usual time Monday morning with his meat cart, having stocked up at the East village.

Arthur Bailey lost everything except what he wore. He had burned among other things a valuable young horse, sleigh, robes, harness and fur coat, etc., to the value of $400.

The meat market cat went through fire and smoke and was not seen until Wednesday, when she was discovered running around the ruins, still hopeful, but her hirsute appendages somewhat abraded.

Seven homes and six places of business have been destroyed by fire here in about six months. It is reported that one of our enterprising citizens has his eye on the Ramsdell property with a view to erect a large business block if it can be bought at a reasonable price.

EDWARD R. ANDREWS DEAD.
April 25, 1941
Retired Boston Business Man Conducted Guernsey Farm on West Hill—Stricken with Apoplexy.

Edward R. Andrews, 84, of Putney, a retired Boston business man who for several years had conducted a fine Guernsey farm on Putney West hill, known as Elm-Leigh farm, died about 8 o'clock Sunday evening, following a shock of apoplexy a few days earlier.

Mr. Andrews was a man of distinguished presence, a thoroughly competent business man, who took great pleasure in the work which he had chosen for the sunset of his life. He did in a very complete manner everything to which he set his hand, and he established a farm which is a continuous object lesson in the best modern methods of profitable cultivation. He had marked success in growing alfalfa, and his dairy products were prize winners at the Valley fair and wherever shown.

In an illustrated story of his farm the Practical Dairyman, published in New York, said recently:

"The house is built on a knoll, about 1,000 feet above sea level, and commanding most beautiful views of the rolling country on all sides. The picturesque Connecticut river passes about three miles from the house. It would be difficult to imagine a more ideal life than that on Elm-Leigh farm, setting an example to breeders of Guernseys of what can be done to better the breed, demonstrating to the neighboring farmers how the land can be improved, how crops can be increased by modern, practical and scientific farming, for that is exactly what Mr. Andrews is doing, but he has a hard row to hoe."

The body was taken Tuesday morning on the train leaving Putney at 9.27 to Boston by way of Bellows Falls. Funeral services in Boston were followed by cremation.

Mr. Andrews was born in Boston on Dec. 22, 1831, the son of William Turell Andrews and Fanny Mackay (Reynolds) Andrews. His education was received at Chauncey Hall school, the Adams school and the Boston Latin school, before he went to college, and he was graduated A. B. in 1853 from Harvard, which in 1856 gave him an A. M. degree.

After leaving college, Mr. Andrews spent about two years in Europe and later was on a farm for nearly ten years. He afterward became a banker in Paris, where he continued in business for about ten years as Andrews & Co. Following that, Mr. Andrews introduced an improved method of creosoting timber in the United States, and he had operated in Boston, as well as in New Jersey and Virginia. He had been a director of the United States Coal and Oil company.

In politics Mr. Andrews was a Republican and in his church affiliation was a Unitarian. He was a member of the Unitarian club, Boston; the Massachusetts Agricultural society, and the Harvard and Century clubs in New York. On Dec. 6, 1855, Mr. Andrews married, in New York, Sarah Hannah Addams, whom he had outlived.

He leaves two daughters, Sarah G. and Mary T. Andrews, and one son, William T., all of Boston. He leaves also one sister.

Since that time until two years or more ago Mr. Andrews traveled extensively as assistant manager and manager of opera companies. About two years ago he came here from Montreal and until his illness he had been employed by the Dunham Brothers Co., first in the retail department and then in the office. In 1892 he married Lillian Newton Shattuck, who survives.

Mr. Andrews was a member of Waufastique lodge of Odd Fellows and the Vermont Wheel club. He was especially congenial and companionable and during his brief residence here formed many close friendships. He was thoroughly loyal and sincere, and the solicitude which his illness caused on the part of a wide circle of friends was especially marked.

WILLARD ARMS.

Mr. Willard Arms, one of the best known and most prominent of the older residents of Brattleboro, died at his home in the West village on Wednesday morning after a short illness from pneumonia. Mr. Arms came of distinguished ancestry in the early history of Brattleboro, and was the last survivor of that family, with the exception of his sister, Mrs. Atwater, now living in Phelps, N. Y. Mr. Arms's great-grandfather was Maj. John Arms, one of the earliest settlers of this town. Mr. Willard Arms had in his possession the commission given to his great-grandfather by Sir Henry Moore, governor of New York, as "Major of the Regiment Foot in the said Province, whereof Thomas Chandler, Esquire, is Colonel." At the time John Arms received this commission he kept a tavern which stood at the foot of the first descent in the road a few rods north of the present site of the asylum, and he owned what are now the asylum meadows. He died about 1770, and his burial was in the old cemetery above Centreville. Dr. Willard Arms, grandson of Maj. John Arms, and son of Josiah Arms, was one of the early and prominent physicians of Brattleboro. He studied medicine with Dr. Williams of Deerfield, Mass., married Susan Arms of Deerfield in 1803, and settled in Stukely, Canada, returning to Brattleboro, however, after a year, to settle the estate of his father. Dr. Arms remained here for 14 years, building during that time the N. B. Williston house, now owned by Prof. Williston W. Walker. Selling his Brattleboro practice Dr. Arms removed to Northfield, Mass., remaining until 1833, when he returned and settled in the West village, spending there the remaining 30 years of his life, his death taking place in September, 1863, at the age of about 83 years.

Willard Arms was born in the village of East Brattleboro in the year 1806, about two years after the return of his parents from Canada. He was probably born in a house where E. P. Carpenter's house now stands, living here until the removal of his father to Northfield, as above stated. He received a good education in the schools of the time, and in his early manhood became a clerk in a store at Warwick, Mass. Previous to his coming to West Brattleboro to live with his parents he married his first wife, Gracia Liscom of Hinsdale. He soon after became a clerk in the store of Orlin Pratt of West Brattleboro, where he remained for a considerable number of years. Of this marriage two children were born, one of whom died in infancy. The other grew to womanhood, but died several years ago, leaving one son, George Mills of Ansonia, Conn., who is Mr. Arms's only descendant. Mr. Arms's second wife was Mrs. Diantha Cobleigh, who survives him. He was a man of excellent education, intelligently interested in public affairs, and served the town as selectman for several years. He was a good accountant, and was often called upon as referee in disputed cases. Almost to the time of his death he wrote a remarkably handsome round hand of the old school. He was of a genial temper, and had a ready wit which made him always an interesting companion. He had been for many years a faithful member of the Congregational church. The funeral is to be held at the church this afternoon. Mrs. Arms is now critically ill. Mrs. Atwater arrived yesterday to attend the funeral.

GAS TANK DEATHS CALLED ACCIDENT

Couple Overcome in Drip Room, Possibly on
Jan. 10

BODIES FOUND ON INSPECTION TOUR

JAN 23 — 1948

Satisfied that both deaths were accidental, State's Atty. Ernest F. Berry said yesterday he wouldn't order autopsies performed on bodies of Guy M. Way, 30, of 108 Elliot Street and Miss Ella Atherton, 22, of Wilmington and West Brattleboro, which were found early Wednesday afternoon in the drip room adjacent to the Central Vermont Public Service Corp. gas storage tank on Bridge Street.

Dr. Oscar A. Burton, town health officer, ascribed the deaths to gas poisoning. It was possible that the pair might also have suffered from exposure as the bodies might have lain in the small, unheated building for several days, according to Police Chief Joseph S. Hollday.

Making a periodic inspection of the so-called drip room, which is located between the large tank and the Allen Oil Co. garage, Elmer Clark, C.V.P.S. employe, made the gruesome discovery a few minutes after 1 p.m. It was reported immediately to police, who called in Dr. Burton and State's Attorney Berry.

Clark told police that gas did escape into the room and that he once was nearly overcome by it. He found both doors closed and had to force his way in as the bodies rested against one of them.

Both victims were instantly recognized by police. Way had been missing from his home since Jan. 10 and his wife had enlisted the aid of police and the probation department in a search for him. He was on probation after a conviction on a breach of the peace charge. Miss Atherton had also figured in a breach of the peace case recently.

Miss Atherton, who had been living in West Brattleboro for about a year, had with her a letter ready for posting which, according to its contents, was written in a local restaurant on Jan. 10. She used Wilmington as a return address and dated the letter Jan. 10.

In Hand or Pocket.

The young woman had carried the letter under a packet of stationery in her hand or coat pocket as she did not carry a pocketbook. A wallet was found on her person.

This prompted a theory that the couple may have been dead since the night of Jan. 10. It was reported to police that Way was seen last Saturday night and Miss Atherton was also seen last Saturday, but there seemed to be a possibility that it was the Saturday before, which was Jan. 10.

Edward Atherton Dies; Alumni Parade Leader

Edward H. Atherton, 80, a member of the class of 1885 of Brattleboro High School, and for many years a familiar figure at the head of the annual alumni parades, died Saturday evening at 5:45 o'clock at the Scranton convalescent home on Central street. He had been a patient at the home over a year.

Mr. Atherton retired several years ago after working a number of years for the Crosby Milling Co. As a young man he worked in the F. A. Whitney clothing store and for Young and Knowlton. He later worked in the office of Dunham Brothers Co.

Mr. Atherton's only sister, Lucy (Atherton) Hackley, wife of John M. Hackley of Greenfield, Mass., died a number of years ago.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock at Rohde's funeral home. Rev. Kenneth Hutchinson officiating. Burial took place in Prospect Hill cemetery, friends serving as bearers Mr. and Mrs. John Weaver of Greenfield, Mass., came to attend the services.

A watch on Miss Atherton's wrist had stopped at 8 o'clock, police said. Chief Hollday and Officers Richard J. Jones, Reginald D. Belville and John B. Clark went to scene of the double tragedy immediately after the call came in. Dr. Burton gave permission for removal of the bodies to Mitchell's Funeral Home.

Purple Heart Veteran.

A native of North Hero, Vt. served with the Ninth Division, U. S. Army, overseas during the war and was a Purple Heart veteran of the North African campaign.

On May 12, 1945, he married Theresa Lavender of North Hero at Swanton and they came to Brattleboro and made their home in September of that year. He had been employed at the Estey Organ Co. They had one child, Morris, who was a year old last September. Way is also survived by his father, Wyman Way, of North Hero.

Funeral services for Way will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at St. Michael's Catholic Church. The body will be placed in Mitchell's receiving vault awaiting burial next spring.

Funeral services for Miss Atherton will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Covey's Funeral Home, Wilmington, with burial in Intervale Cemetery.

She was born in Wilmington April 13, 1925, a daughter of Mrs. Florence Atherton and the late Forrest Atherton. WILLARD ARMS. VP

Mr. Willard Arms, one of the best known and most prominent of the older residents of Brattleboro, died at his home in the West village on Wednesday morning after a short illness from pneumonia. Mr. Arms came of distinguished ancestry in the early history of Brattleboro, and was the last survivor of that family, with the exception of his sister, Mrs. Atwater, now living in Phelps, N. Y. Mr. Arms's great-grandfather was Maj. John Arms, one of the earliest settlers of this town. Mr. Willard Arms had in his possession the commission given to his great-grandfather by Sir Henry Moore, governor of New York, as "Major of the Regiment Foot in the said Province, whereof Thomas Chandler, Esquire, is Colonel." At the time John Arms received this commission he kept a tavern which stood at the foot of the first descent in the road a few rods north of the present site of the asylum, and he owned what are now the asylum meadows. He died about 1770, and his burial was in the old cemetery above Centreville. Dr. Willard Arms, grandson of Maj. John Arms, and son of Josiah Arms, was one of the early and prominent physicians of Brattleboro. He studied medicine with Dr. Williams of Deerfield, Mass., married Susan Arms of Deerfield in 1803, and settled in Stukely, Canada, returning to Brattleboro, however, after a year, to settle the estate of his father. Dr. Arms remained here for 14 years, building during that time the N. B. Williston house, now owned by Prof. Williston W. Walker. Selling his Brattleboro practice Dr. Arms removed to Northfield, Mass., remaining until 1833, when he returned and settled in the West village, spending there the remaining 30 years of his life, his death taking place in September, 1863, at the age of about 83 years.

Willard Arms was born in the village of East Brattleboro in the year 1806, about two years after the return of his parents from Canada. He was probably born in a house where E. P. Carpenter's house now stands, living here until the removal of his father to Northfield, as above stated. He received a good education in the schools of the time, and in his early manhood became a clerk in a store at Warwick, Mass. Previous to his coming to West Brattleboro to live with his parents he married his first wife, Gracia Liscom of Hinsdale. He soon after became a clerk in the store of Orlin Pratt of West Brattleboro, where he remained for a considerable number of years. Of this marriage two children were born, one of whom died in infancy. The other grew to womanhood, but died several years ago, leaving one son, George Mills of Ansonia, Conn., who is Mr. Arms's only descendant. Mr. Arms's second wife was Mrs. Diantha Cobleigh, who survives him. He was a man of excellent education, intelligently interested in public affairs, and served the town as selectman for several years. He was a good accountant, and was often called upon as referee in disputed cases. Almost to the time of his death he wrote a remarkably handsome round hand of the old school. He was of a genial temper, and had a ready wit which made him always an interesting companion. He had been for many years a faithful member of the Congregational church.

MRS. WILLARD ARMS.

Diantha L. Adkins, wife of the late Willard Arms, a notice of whose death appeared in these columns last week, died at her home in the West village Wednesday morning at the age of 73. Her illness had not been considered serious until within the past three weeks. Mrs. Arms was the daughter of the late Timothy Adkins, whose death occurred in December, 1890, at the age of 97 years. Her whole life was spent in West Brattleboro. Her first husband was Franklin Cobleigh, to whom she was married in 1837. Mr. Cobleigh was at that time employed as watchmaker by Thompson & Ranger at the East village. Mr. Cobleigh died in 1843. Two children were born of this marriage. One died at an early age, and the other, the late Frank Cobleigh, became the proprietor of the Record and Farmer. About 1866 Mrs. Cobleigh was married to Mr. Arms. Mrs. Arms was a woman of estimable character, a consistent member of the Congregational church, and enjoyed the confidence of a wide circle of friends. She leaves four grandchildren, the children of Frank Cobleigh, and one brother, John Adkins of the West village, who is the only survivor of her father's family. The funeral is to be held at the house this afternoon.

MURDERED IN FRANCE.

Wounded Body of a Brattleboro Boy
Found in Canal at Havre.

Mar 2, 1900

Thomas M. Atkins Was a Member of the United States Marine Corps on the Cruiser Prairie--Was Probably Robbed by Seaport Thugs.

The following cablegram to the New York Sunday World told of the sad end of a well-known Brattleboro boy: "The body of Thomas M. Atkinson, a marine, belonging to the United States cruiser, Prairie, who was missed on Dec. 20, was found yesterday floating in the canal at Havre. It was fully identified by the United States consul there. When the Prairie made her first trip to Havre, bringing the first load of American official exhibits, Atkinson got shore leave with the others, but failed to return. Nothing could be discovered of him, despite all efforts. Officials concluded he had deserted, and the Prairie left without him. The fact that the body, though badly decomposed, shows several wounds, leads to the belief that Atkinson was robbed and murdered by seaport thugs."

The young man referred to is Thomas M. Atkins, known to all his friends as "Tommy" Atkins. His father was a liveryman in Brattleboro 18 to 20 years ago, and Tommy was a member of the class in the public schools which graduated from the High school in 1887. He spent several years with his sister at Lyons, N. Y., but had lived in Brattleboro within the last 10 years, being employed as an express messenger. He was a nephew of Mrs. O. A. Alvord of Elm street.

Friends in Springfield, Mass., received letters from Tommy written just before he went from the ship for shore leave. He wrote that he had not been feeling well, and that he had had a good sum of American money changed for French money, and that he intended to make some purchases ashore. He referred to the bulk of the French currency, saying his purse was stuffed with it.

Members of Company H, Springfield, Mass., who served on the Prairie during the Spanish-American war, formed warm friendships with Atkins. They speak of him as a young man of good habits, and honorable in all his dealings. Atkins visited in Springfield last Labor day and also on Thanksgiving day.

When Atkins enlisted in the navy the "on" was added to his name by mistake. Tommy told his friends that so much red-tape was necessary to get the record changed, that he was going to let the name remain Atkinson until the end of his five years' enlistment, July 17, 1901.

Mr. Atkins's father, Henry Atkins, now lives in Lyons, N. Y. The young man's sister, who was Mary Atkins, is the wife of Seymour Scott, who organized the maltster's trust. Mrs. Scott lives at The Netherlands in New York in the winter, and at Sodus Point in the summer.

MRS. AUSTIN DIES OF HER INJURIES

Sept 4 1936
Accident to Well-Known Brattleboro
Woman Causes Her Death in Hospital in Greenfield.

Mrs. Anna V. (Hanley) Austin, 66, wife of Martin Austin, vice president of the Vermont Savings bank, died Tuesday evening at Franklin County hospital in Greenfield, Mass., of injuries sustained Saturday in an automobile accident in Whately, Mass. Mrs. Austin's condition had been serious since the accident, caused when Mr. and Mrs. Austin's car, driven by Mr. Austin, skidded on the wet road and collided with another car. Mrs. Austin sustained a fractured pelvis and other injuries. Mr. Austin, who was taken to the Greenfield hospital for treatment for minor cuts and bruises, came to his Chapin street home Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin left Brattleboro about 8.30 o'clock Saturday morning in their Pontiac car, Mr. Austin driving. They planned to meet their son, Francis Austin of Longmeadow, Mass., and the latter's wife, in West Springfield, and the four intended to go to Old Lyme, Conn., for a week's vacation.

South of Graves Four Corners in Whately, on a wet, crowned road, while Mr. Austin was driving near the shoulder of the highway, the car began to skid and Mr. Austin put on the brakes, which caused the rear end of the machine to swerve to the right. The car then shot across the road in front of a northbound automobile, which struck the Austin car just back of the right front door.

Mrs. Austin, who was riding on that side, was thrown forward and her left thigh was forced into the left side of the pelvis. She was not injured externally, barring minor cuts, but physicians thought she might have internal injuries. Whether she has or not has not been determined as yet.

All the glass in the Austin car was broken, except the windshield, and it was considerably damaged otherwise, as was the northbound machine.

The northbound car was driven by Paul Benson of 705 Russell street, New Haven, Conn., according to State Trooper Walter Burke of the Northampton barracks, who investigated.

Passengers in the Benson machine were Herbert and Elizabeth Benson of 705 Russell street, New Haven, and Miss Anna Oberman of Howard street, Ned Haven. The Bensons were treated at a near-by house, for small cuts and bruises, but Miss Oberman was taken to the Franklin County hospital for treatment for bruises and lacerations that include a bad cut on the forehead.

Anna Veronica Hanley was born in Oswego, N. Y., April 9, 1870, a daughter of Patrick and Sabina (Hickey) Hanley. She received her education in the Oswego schools and held stenographic positions in Oswego and Boston before coming to Brattleboro in 1889. She became secretary for Mr. Austin, then general manager of the Carpenter Organ Co. The couple were married July 8, 1896.

Mrs. Austin leaves her husband, one son, Francis M. Austin of Longmeadow, Mass., and two grandchildren, Ann and Francis M., jr., children of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Austin. The sudden and untimely death of Mr. and Mrs. Austin's only daughter, Helen Hanley Austin, occurred less than two months ago. She also leaves six brothers, Fred, Joseph, Harry, James and George Hanley, all of Oswego, N. Y., and Frank S. Hanley of South Orange, N. J., and New York. One of Mrs. Austin's sisters, all of whom are deceased, was Mrs. Henry R. Carrier of Oswego, who died several years ago. Mrs. Carrier was well known here by her frequent visits with her sister.

A member of the Brattleboro Woman's club for many years, Mrs. Austin was a faithful attendant at the club meetings. She also belonged to the Auxiliary to the Brattleboro Memorial hospital and Ave Maria Circle, Daughters of Isabella.

Social interests never approached in importance Mrs. Austin's interest for her home and family, in contributing to whose welfare she found her real happiness. The remarkably close companionship she enjoyed with her daughter was a symbol of her devoted influence and a tribute to her character and charm. She was beloved by many friends.

Funeral services, with requiem high mass, will be held at St. Michael's Roman Catholic church this morning at 9 o'clock. Burial will take place in the Austin family lot in St. Michael's cemetery.

COL. WILLIAM AUSTINE

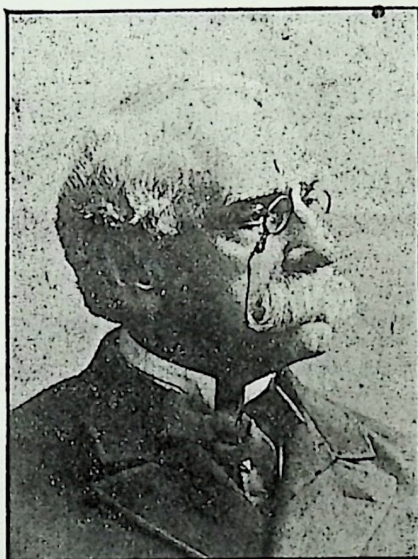

Death of the Oldest West Point Graduate on the Army Rolls.

Sept 4 — 1904

He Was a Veteran of Three Wars and Had Been a Resident of Brattleboro More Than Forty Years.

Col. William Austine, who died early Sunday morning at the Brooks House from congestion of the brain, was in his 90th year, and for some time had been distinguished as the veteran of three wars, the oldest graduate of West Point on the army rolls, and the oldest retired officer of the United States army. He had not been in good health the past two years and much of the time was under the care of a nurse. His last illness was of about two weeks' duration.

Col. Austine was born in Stonington, Conn., in Jan., 1815, his real name being William A. Brown. On account of some litigation, however, his name was changed to William Austine soon after his enlistment in the army. He was appointed a cadet from Connecticut to West Point, September 1, 1833, and was graduated July 1, 1838. Immediately after his graduation he was appointed 2d lieutenant of the 2d dragoons and 12 days later was transferred to duty as 2d lieutenant of the 3d dragoons, in which regiment he remained until November, 1839. At that time he was promoted to the rank of 1st lieutenant and assigned to the 3d artillery, a regiment distinguished for the number of its officers who became famous during the civil war.

Col. Austine served in the Florida war against the Seminole Indians from 1838 to 1842 as adjutant in the 3d artillery. He was in garrison at Fort Pickens from 1841 to 1842 and at Fort Moultrie, S. C., from 1842 to 1846. During the war with Mexico, Col. Austine took part in the siege of Vera Cruz and in the battles of Cerro Gordo, Contreras and Churubusco, as well as in the skirmish of Amazoque and the capture of San Antonio. For signal ability and gallantry in this campaign, he was promoted to captain of the 3d artillery August 13, 1847, and a short time after was given the rank of brevet major for gallant and meritorious conduct. After the Mexican war he was in garrison at Fort Adams, R. I., for several years, with the exception of a short time spent in Florida, during the Indian hostilities of 1849 and 1850. Later, he was stationed at Fort Constitution, N. H., and Fort Wood, N. Y. On account of poor health he was granted a leave of absence from 1854 to 1861, spending a part of the time in travel abroad. In the latter year he assumed active duty in the garrison at San Francisco harbor, and was at that time appointed major of the 3d artillery.

Col. Austine was retired from active service Feb. 20, 1862, for disability resulting from exposure in line duty, but he continued to serve as superintendent of the mustering and volunteer recruiting service of Vermont at Burlington for three months after his discharge and was in Brattleboro in the same line of duty until November, 1866. His services here were performed with great ability and were warmly commended by the department at Washington. In September, 1865, he was given the rank of brevet lieutenant-colonel and brevet colonel for long and faithful service. Since his retirement from army life, Col. Austine had lived at the Brooks House.

During his service in the Mexican war, Col. Austine kept a detailed journal which gives a wonderfully clear description of the different actions in which he was engaged. During one of the battles, a shell from the enemy's guns buried itself in the sand within a few yards of the Colonel, who unconcernedly marked the spot and a few months later unearthed the missile. The shell is now in the Brooks Free library.

The funeral was held at the Brooks House Tuesday morning, and was attended by old residents who had known Col. Austine for years. Rev. E. T. Mathison, rector of St. Michael's Episcopal church, in which the Colonel took great interest, officiated. The body was taken to Hartford, Conn., for burial in the Cedar Hill cemetery, a nephew, Howard M. Eustis of Mobile, Ala., and Herbert B. Chamberlain accompanying it. Mr. Eustis had been with his uncle for several weeks, and had frequently visited him in his declining years. The bearers were W. J. Pentland, Col. H. E. Taylor, George C. Averill, C. F. R. Jenne, Col. G. H. Bond and Ornan Prescott.

Col. Austine had lived quietly during his long residence at the Brooks House and was not intimately known except by a few people, by whom he will be remembered as a courteous gentleman of the old school with the military manner and bearing befitting one of military training and life.

Col. Austine was the last of his father's family of six children—four sons and two daughters. He had recently been promoted under a late act of Congress to be lieutenant-colonel, his commission from President Roosevelt bearing date May 23.

Mr. Austin was employed on the railroad some years, and afterwards in different occupations. Mr. Austin married 48 years ago Bridget Curran, who survives him with three sons, Martin J. of New York city, Michael and John J. of this town, and three daughters, Margaret, Nellie, wife of William Boyce, and Lizzie, wife of George Danyew of Middlebury. In witness whereof I do hereunto set my hand and seal and publish and declare this to be my last will and testament this 19th day of August in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and three.

WILLIAM AUSTINE.

Signed, sealed, published and declared by said William Austine to be his last will and testament, in the presence of us who have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses in the presence of the testator and in the presence of one another this 19th day of August in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and three at Brattleboro, Vt.

ANDREW J. HOPKINS.

Codicil. Whereas, I, William Austine, of Brattleboro, Vt., having by my last will and testament in writing duly executed, bearing date of August 19, 1903, bequeathed my estate to certain persons and associations, now I, said William Austine, being desirous of changing my first will in certain respects, do therefore make this my present writing, which I will and direct to be annexed as codicil to my will and testament as a part thereof, and in it the following:

In addition to the bequest given to Miss Mary M. Brown, 26 South Main street, in my will of August 19, 1903, I now give and bequeath her the sum of $500, in appreciation of faithful service rendered me and my friends during many years, and I also give and bequeath Miss Mary F. Cummings, Brooks House, the additional sum of $500 for faithful services rendered during my illness.

The three young men who were the witnesses of the original will are witnesses of the codicil.

In a second codicil, dated October 26, 1903, the testator directs that the name of William S. Newton as associate executor of his last will and testament be dropped in consequence of his other duties not allowing him to accept the office, and that Herbert B. Chamberlain and Herbert E. Taylor, both of Brattleboro, be associate executors in the event of accident to the executor already named. This codicil also bequeaths to Herbert E. Taylor $1000 in addition to the bequest already given him in the will of August 19, 1903.

This will was filed in the probate court Sept. 10.

Death of Martin Austin.

On Sunday, July 16, Mr. Austin had a severe attack of renal colic while at the Roman Catholic cemetery. He was taken home and was in a critical condition several days, but on Tuesday he was much better. In the evening his physician, Dr. Lane, called and Mr. Austin greeted him with a cordial salutation and remarked that he was "feeling fine" and would have a good night's rest. Scarcely had he finished speaking when he turned in bed and breathed his last.

Mr. Austin was a son of James Austin and was born in Boscawen, County Kerry, Ireland, April 9, 1838. The family came to America and located in Chicopee Falls, Mass., when Mr. Austin was a lad of seven years. Two years later they came to Brattleboro. He next went into the blacksmithing business learning the trade in H. A. Pratt's carriage factory. Afterwards he went into the blacksmith shop on Flat street, then owned by R. S. Hall and later by A. P. Hall, and after the death of the latter Mr. Austin established himself in the shop on Elm street, where he has spent the past 20 years. Years ago he was a member of the Brattleboro fire department and assisted in the competitions in which Brattleboro's old hand engines were prize winners. He was an excellent workman. He was a hard-working, frugal and industrious man, square in his dealings, and respected by all.

In 1862 he married in Brattleboro Elizabeth Brosnahan, who came from the township of Tralee, Ireland. She survives with five children, Katherine, wife of Letter Carrier T. A. At the time of his death he still owned two cottages at the lake, the island and a farm in Chesterfield.

Mr. Averill married in Brattleboro on Sept. 6, 1909, Miss Florence G. Putnam, who survives. He also leaves one son, Lieut. James C. Averill, of the U. S. Army Air Corps, now stationed at Barksdale field, Louisiana, and one sister, Margaret C., wife of George E. Adams of Longmeadow, Mass.

DEATH OF July 30, 1915
Protracted Illness Necessitated Several Operations—Had Been Prominent in Centre Church Work.

After a protracted illness which necessitated several operations, Mrs. Nellie E. (Chubbuck) Averill, 54, wife of George C. Averill, died in her home on Main street about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Averill was able to go out to a limited extent up to last December. In January she went to the Memorial hospital, where the final operation was performed, and about a month later she returned home, where she declined gradually until the end.

Mrs. Averill was born in Nevada City, Calif., Oct. 21, 1860. In her girlhood the family moved to Boston. She graduated from the normal school in Salem, Mass., and later taught school in Greenfield. On Oct. 12, 1881, she was married in South Boston to George C. Averill, formerly of Greenfield, who was then teller in the First National bank in Northampton.

Mr. and Mrs. Averill came to Brattleboro in 1885, Mr. Averill becoming successively teller, cashier, and president of the Vermont National bank, resigning the latter position on May 10 of this year. On first coming here Mr. and Mrs. Averill boarded with Mrs. Barrows on Walnut street, going from there to their home on Terrace street which they occupied many years, and from there moving a few years ago to the B. D. Harris residence at 213 Main street, which they had bought and improved extensively and which has since been their home.

In 1886 Mrs. Averill became a member of the Centre Congregational church. She took an active part in its varied activities, and served efficiently both as president and treasurer of the Woman's association. She was a member of the Brattleboro Woman's club, the Sunshine society and the Woman's Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A.

The interests of these organizations and her home and family cares, to which she was thoroughly and lovingly devoted, kept her ever active, but whether in sickness or health she never forgot her many friends. She was happiest when doing for others, and even in her last illness she manifested a tender solicitude for her friends, who will always cherish her memory. She was a woman of remarkably cheerful, trustful and buoyant spirit, facing the inevitable with marked calmness and Christian fortitude.

Besides her husband Mrs. Averill leaves a son, Richard C. Averill, bookkeeper in the Vermont National bank, and a daughter, Margaret C., wife of George E. Adams of Springfield, Mass.; also her mother, Mrs. Caroline Chubbuck, a brother, Herman Chubbuck, and a sister, Mrs. Laura E. Cayvan, all of South Boston.

The funeral was held in the home on Main street Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and many friends and relatives were present. Rev. Roy M. Houghton, pastor of the Centre church officiated and Miss Emma J. Gregg sang four selections, Rock of Ages, Nearer, My God, to Thee, We May Not Climb the Heavenly Steeps and God Is Love. There were many beautiful floral remembrances. Among those present were Herman F. Chubbuck and Mrs. Laura E. Cayvan of South Boston, brother and sister of Mrs. Averill, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Adams of Springfield, Mass., daughter and son-in-law and Mrs. Mary A. Averill of Cambridge, Mass., sister-in-law. The burial took place in Morningside cemetery. The honorary bearers were Dr. Henry D. a former son-in-law James Hull of Brattleboro; his sister Evelyn of Bennington, Vt., grandchildren Steven Hull of Brattleboro and Jennifer Hull of Guilford; great-grandchildren Olivia Gray and Chloe Hull of Brattleboro, Ethan Gray, serving in the U. S. Army, Ft. Benning, Ga., Jacob and Stori Hull of Lynchburg, Va., as well as several nieces and nephews.

He was predeceased by sisters Helen Healy and Marion Jackson.

Raised in Brattleboro, during his youth Richard would spend summer days in Strafford, Vt. with his Uncle Fred Avery. Richard graduated from Brattleboro High School in 1938, followed by six years of service in the U. S. Navy aboard the light cruiser USS Boise, CL-47, and stationed in Pearl Harbor and San Diego until his discharge in 1946. He took great pride in his service, and displayed the American flag at home on the occasion of each national holiday.

On May 12, 1945, Richard married his high school sweetheart, Lois Sawin, in Windsor, Conn. They made their home in San Diego, Calif., for the remainder of Richard's tour of duty.

In 1946, they returned to Brattleboro, where Richard joined his father at the Avery Machine Company, a venture he acquired upon his father's retirement. He was a very successful businessman, known in the community for doing business on a handshake. He also was innovative and ahead of his time with regard to the RECYCLING effort. In 1966, he became a founding member and principal partner in the Melsur Corporation, a company that developed a unique process for manufacturing molded school desktops and seats from sawdust particles.

The spring of 1955 found Richard and his young family moving into their newly-built home on South Street, where he took great pride in developing a good-sized garden, cultivating crops of Kentucky Wonder green beans, Golden Bantam yellow corn and Big Boy beefsteak tomatoes. It would not be unusual to see Richard down on one knee feeding a member of the ever-present family of chipmunks that lived in the stone wall under the big pine tree, and even occasionally rescuing small animals from the compost receptacle. During the winter months, passersby could often see just the top of his toke as he maneuvered his snow blower through large snow drifts, week after week, day or night, to get the job done to stay one step ahead of the snowflakes.

In 1979, Richard retired from the family business, and in 1982, he and Lois moved to the Southwest, enjoying residence among the orange groves of Mesa, Ariz. Discovering a "taste" for green chile, they found many new restaurants to frequent. Dining out and an occasional cold beer or margarita was always a treat for Richard. In 1991, they relocated to Albuquerque where he enjoyed the wonderfully warm climate (having left all of his snow shovels back in Vermont) and feeding the variety of birds that came to call in his backyard. Always an early riser, Richard was known for taking long, daily walks before sunrise.

Richard and Lois enjoyed their retirement and traveled through all areas of our country. Washington, D.C. was a favorite destination, with family members joining them for long week-ends of site-seeing and good fun together. Occasional summertime U.S. travel to Vermont included stops along the way to visit friends and relatives. They were frequent visitors to Branson, Mo., enjoying the country legends music venues.

He loved his family and took great interest and pride in all of their accomplishments. Simply put, he was the best father and Boppa, as he was known to his grandchildren, we could have had. When we were in his presence, he always made us feel so welcomed and loved.

Over the years, Richard and his family acquired numerous household pets; cats, Whiskers and Cricket (whom he tolerated) and Siberian Huskies, Koala and Trinkka. None brought greater joy to him, however, than Bob ('ole-timer), his daughter Gretchen's tripawd yellow lab. Bob was a frequent visitor, and he learned to navigate around Richard's walker, reaching close enough for a loving pat on the head.

Throughout most of his 93 years, Richard enjoyed excellent health. When in 1953 an industrial accident nearly severed the fingers of his dominant right hand forever limiting their movement, he never allowed this impairment to become disabling as was evidenced by his golf scores.

Among his endearing qualities, he is best remembered for his sense of humor, his generous nature, and his especially hearty laugh. We actually believe he coined the well-known phrase, "go with the flow." There wasn't anything that he could not repair with his hands. He was practical, clever and creative, using good common sense to solve a problem.

Relationships with friends were treated with high regard by Richard. He valued getting to know the many people who crisscrossed his life. Quality was always more important than quantity to him. He had several life-long friends, local boys Frank Merrill, Rudy Hammarlund and Harold "Jeff Barry". At the Melsur Corporation, he worked closely with Peter Webster and then in his later years, he came to revere a very special person, David Herr of Mesa, Ariz., whom he considered to be one of his best friends.

Some say old sailors never die, they just sail away. Richard lived and brought unto this earth a bit of beauty...love...and faith. And now, although he will be missed, we have our memories of time together; his life is reflected in our hearts. And as one business acquaintance recently remarked, "Dick Avery easily taught me so much about what was really important in life. Our loss is Heaven's gain."

Memorial contributions are invited to be made to the Southeastern Guide Dogs, 4210 77th Street East, Palmetto, Florida 34221.

A memorial service will be conducted at Meetinghouse Hill Cemetery to be announced at some future date.

Reta loved her family and enjoyed the holidays, especially Christmas. Her children and grandchildren always found lots of presents under the Christmas tree. She was a wonderful cook and made the best rolls that any of us have eaten. Reta spent a great deal of time attending to her beautiful flower gardens, watching the humming birds & butterflies and enjoying the fresh air. Reta liked shopping trips with her granddaughters, Carrie and Kim. She also enjoyed playing tick tac toe and watching TV with her great grandson Sammy Fontaine.

As a result of enjoying learning and advancing her knowledge, Reta excelled at schools in Randolph and advanced (skipped) one grade in grade school. She loved math. So, it was natural that she became an accountant/ bookkeeper. The local employers that she worked for from the 1960's until her retirement included Rogers Construction Company, Cersosimo Lumber Company and Tarmy Lumber Company.

Reta was loved very much by her family and friends. Although she will be sorely missed, we will always have her in our thoughts and prayers. We will all be together again sometime in the future. For now, we know that there is another angel watching over all of us.

Lois Sarah (Sawin) Avery, 95, of Albuquerque, N.M., formerly of Brattleboro. Died peacefully on July 20, 2019. Drawing from conversations over the years, it is easily remarked that Lois held life in the palm of her hands. Always an element of "my way" to her step, Lois experienced a rich and full 95 years of near excellent health. She lived out her final years independently at home in Albuquerque with Precious, her soulcat, and friend, Michelle Garnham. And although her request was to simply pass away in the comfort of her home, a fall on June 25 prevented fulfillment of this final wish. Born in Brattleboro on Oct. 1, 1923 to Lydia (Bohne) and Earl C. Sawin, she was delivered at home by local obstetrician, Dr. Grace

Burnett, who more often than not arrived at the birth home on horseback. Lois attended local elementary schools. She was quite athletic as a young girl and enjoyed skiing on the hill behind her family home. During high school she played basketball and was team captain in her senior year. She graduated with honors from Brattleboro High School in 1941, the same year she was awarded the DAR Good Citizenship Award Silver "B", one of the proudest moments of her life. In September 1941, she enrolled in the Hartford (Conn.) School of Nursing from which she graduated with honors as a registered nurse in 1944. Following graduation, she was employed by Hartford Hospital as a night supervisor until her marriage in May 1945 to her high school sweetheart, Richard Avery, also of Brattleboro. They settled into their first home in San Diego, Calif., during a time when Mr. Avery was completing a six-year service commitment in the Navy. They returned to Brattleboro in 1946. Lois worked in her profession for many years in Brattleboro and, in 1964, elected to return to education participating in undergraduate studies at Greenfield Community College. In 1972, she enrolled in a degree nursing program at St. Joseph's College in Windham, Maine. She always said one of her most treasured accomplishments was in receiving her BSPA at age 55. She served as director of nursing at Brattleboro Memorial Hospital from 1965 to 1970, after which she was hired as administrator of Linden Lodge Nursing Home until 1973, when she was named administrator at Thompson House, a position from which she retired in 1983. She was very active in the Vermont Nurses Association, which she served as secretary from 1971 to 1973. In 1977, she was elected president of the Vermont Nursing Home Association and, one year later, was named director of the Board of Administrators. Lois and Richard moved to the Southwest in 1983, enjoying residence among the fragrant orange groves of Mesa, Ariz., until 1991 when they relocated to Albuquerque. An avid gardener, Lois could often be found nurturing a rose garden. In earlier days in Brattleboro, her South Street vegetable garden was a masterpiece of deliciousness; she developed a specialty for growing and canning Kentucky Wonder green beans for her family to enjoy throughout the long Vermont winter. Lois enjoyed doing fine needle work, a skill learned during summer vacations with her grandmother. This talent extended to sewing and knitting, crafting stuffed animals, and crewel work. There was very little handwork she could not accomplish with the relative ease of her expert eye. Relationships with friends were a source of enjoyment, especially time spent with a circle of women who called themselves "The Knitting Club." With a bonded interest in handwork, their gatherings offered a means to discuss the latest goings on "in town" as well. For relaxation, Lois enjoyed ten-pin bowling with teammates and occasional rounds of golf at Stratton Mountain with her husband. Lois and Richard enjoyed their retirement and traveled through all areas of our country. Pets always had a place in her heart, a love she acquired from a very early age. She was very fond of her two family felines, Whiskers and Cricket, both of whom lived out their long lives hunting in the fields behind her home in West Brattleboro. Lois also had a great love of Siberian Huskies, these beautiful dogs, Koala and then Trinkka, made their home with the family and were especially glad to be in Vermont during the winter months. So much more telling than these details, is the resilience and tenacity that best describes Lois as she approached each day, especially as her time on earth was coming to a close. Her body was falling apart and she was slowly losing her eyesight and she wasn't sure if she wanted to keep on living with the daily challenges. Yet, Lois never lost her keen insight and ability to rise each morning with a "to do" list in mind ready for pencil and paper; a daily ritual that created purpose for her day. And, she still enjoyed an occasional visit to the local casino to play her favorite slot machine or watching Jeopardy on TV. No day would be complete without her inquiry of the Red Sox or Celtics game times. A brief stay at Presbyterian Hospital early in 2018, presented an opportunity for Lois's legacy in nursing education to be preserved. As she lay in her hospital bed, her nursing cap on her head, thoughts culminated around the lack of personal care and treatment she was receiving. Upon her discharge, she wrote a letter and not long afterward, she was recognized for reigniting the compassion and awareness of individual patient's unique needs. By invitation, she was honored to participate in their Compassion Campaign through a video produced specifically for new employee orientation. Lois was preceded in death by her parents. She was also predeceased by her husband in 2011, sister Lydia Sawin Perry in 2005, and brother Earl Clifton Sawin in 2018. Lois is survived by two daughters, Susan and Gretchen Avery. She is also survived by seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild. MEMORIAL IN-
